COFTY GOOFY.

"LAYING LOW FOR BLACK DUCKS."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY ON THE SQUARE.

In their way, George Duryea and Alf. Price are the wonder of all Long Island. Give them each a shot gun, of big bore, and they are death on game. They hunt chiefly for ducks—black ducks—of which they are said to have killed more at a single shot than would fill a bushel basket. I makes no difference whether the birds are out of water, in water or under water; Alf. or George, either one of them, can fetch them all the same. They can see them farther off and bring them down at longer range than anybody else; and, on more than one occasion, have shot scores of them without seeing them at all—long practice enabling them to judge where they ought to be.

They never went for black ducks without bringing home wagon loads of them. Only once. That happened last fall. They didn't get a duck that time—not of the right kind, at all events.

Early one morning in November our two sports might have been seen engaged in earnest talk with the woolyheaded owner of various murderous traps, fixings, batteries and so forth, designed and employed for the illegal capture and slaughter of game. Had our two worthies been restrained by wholesome fear of the game laws they would not have been found that morning on the shores of South Oyster Bay, bargaining, with a noted poacher, for a couple of batteries and his assistance in their use; nor would they have come to consequent grief.

It less than half an hour from the beginning of their conference, the duck shooters, amply provided with comfort for the inner man during the day, were seated in a boat with batteries attached; the colored chap was rowing, and George and Alf were keeping a bright look out for ducks. The wind was slight, scarcely rippling the waters of the bay, while a huge pile of cloud in the east stood as motionless as a mountain. An unusual stillness prevailed, the only sounds heard being the dip of the oars and their monotonous creak in the rowlocks. A very pleasant variation would have been a wild bird's scream or flap of wing.

"I can't see anything that looks like a duck, far or near," growled George, at length.

"D—d if I can see a feather of any sort," responded Alf.

"Bad sign, bossy," said the darkey. "They don't fly when bad weather's close by. Thar was acres of black ducks all about yer yist'day."

"Well, Zip, pull down to that p'int, yonder; 'taint more than a mile. I guess when we round that, we'll be among 'em. Alf, let's take a little tea for luck."

So saying, George took from a covered basket a black bottle, from which both he and Alf imbibed with evident relish. Zip gave a curious look at the bottle as it was replaced, but said nothing.

"Guess you'd better lay back in the boat, Zip," said George, by and by; "and not row any nearer to the p'int. The tide 'll float the batteries around, and we'll lay low in 'em, till we git a chance to blaze away. When you hear us firing row around and take a hand in. Come, Alf, another taste of tea, and we'll git into the batteries."

The black bottle was again produced, and as George said to Alf that it might be the last chance to drink they would have in an hour or two, each fortified himself with a double allowance, George putting the bottle back into the basket with much reluctance.

Each now betook himself to his battery, and, as Zip cast them loose, he said:—

"Now, lay low, gemmen; I'll look out you don't run foul of anythink, and soon's you begin shootin' you'll find I'm around."

The tide was just at the turn; there was a slight contrary wind, and the progress of the men in their batteries was consequently very slow. Fully half an hour had passed before they rounded the point, and when at last this was done, they found, to their intense disgust, no game.

Standing up and looking over the wide waters, George at last declared he could see ducks flying on the other side of a long sand bar, at least a mile farther on. "There they are, for certain; don't you see 'em?" he asked, excitedly.

"Yes, sir! Sure as a gun, there they be!" replied Alf, looking in the direction indicated by George. "Let's hail old Zip, and git among 'em quick as maybe."

Both men shouted "Zip! Zip!" Then they united in one loud "Hello!" Then, louder and longer, "Hello-o-o!"

"That nigger must be deaf or asleep," said Alf. "Why the devil don't he come?"

"Shout agin," said George. And shout they did, to the top of their lungs, but all to no purpose. No boat—no Zip.

"Wonder if he ain't waiting to hear us fire?" said George. "Maybe he won't come around till we do. Better blaze away once or twice and see if that don't fetch him."

Suiting the action to the word, they fired separately and together, again and again. It was powder wasted, so far as the "boy in the boat" was concerned.

And now they noticed, to their dismay, that the wind had risen and was blowing fresh off shore, the tide was strongly running out and the rate at which they were leaving their native isle soon enabled them to see that Zip and his boat was no longer where they had left him.

"Blast his black heart!" exclaimed Alf, "if he aint sneaked off and left us to our fate!"

"Ye,!" groaned George, "and got all our grub with him, and the tea, too!"

"Well, there's only one chance of ever gitting out of this scrape, and that is to keep up a lively firing. Somebody may hear us and come out and pick us up," said Alf.

"That's all the hope we've got left," said George. "It's a mighty slim one, but here goes!"

Bang! bang! went their pieces—minute guns they might have been called—so quickly were they discharged and reloaded. It was the liveliest practice in the way of shooting at nothing and meaning business all the while that was ever got up at short notice.

The situation grew more and more unpleasant. The easterly wind pierced them to the marrow, while a drenching mist thickened the air and at last hid the shore. They could see nothing but the waves tossing up their white caps as if in wild glee at the approach of fresh victims. In their frail batteries they stood nearly up to their knees in water, with ammunition spent and strength and courage rapidly failing, before relief came.

They were thinking it was about time to say their prayers, when a welcome shout came across the water and fell upon their straining ears:—

"Hello! ahoy! where are you?"

"Hello o-o! here, here! This way! Hurry up—we'll be drownded before you git to us!"

The prospect of rescue gave them new strength and they kept up a continuous yelling until a boat, rowed by a single oarsman, hove in sight.

At the end of the longest half day of all their lives the celebrated duck shooters found themselves again safely on shore.

"Well," said the fisherman who had saved them and in whose hut they were, "I heard you firing for the last hour or so, and taking it along with the bad weather, knowing there couldn't be much of anythink to shoot at, it come into my head arter a spell that there must be somebody in trouble. And even then I didn't like the job of going out to see about it, for 'taint everybody could find his way in this fog; I couldn't, nuther, if I didn't know every inch of the ground from having been 'round here so long."

"Cap," broke in George, very earnestly, "you've saved our lives; now, what kin we do to make it up to you? Only say the word, that's all!"

"Guess you can't do much for me. Anyways, I don't want to be paid for doing my dooty. S'pose you'd do the same by me if you was ever to ketch me in the same sort of a fix?"

"Bet your boots on that, old man!" exclaimed Alf solemnly.

"But you ain't told me how you come to be out yonder in them batteries without a boat. Warn't them some of Old Black Zip's fixins?" asked the fisherman.

"Yes; we hired 'em of him and paid him to go 'long, but the black thief sloped on us, and that's the way we got caught."

"Well, it 'pears to me you warn't wide awake to hire him when he was drunk."

"Drunk?—he was sober as a judge when we engaged him."

"When was that?"

"Early this morning."

"I never see a drunker nigger than he was along in the middle of this forenoon."

"Where was he then?"

"'Bout three mile from here—down near where he lives."

"See the p'int?" queried Alf., looking at George. 'See what the skunk done on us?"

"Certainly," responded George, with the air of a sage. "Got drunk on our 'tea' and rowed ashore."

"Or rowed ashore first and then got drunk," put in the fisherman. "He couldn't do much navigation of any sort when I see him."

"How far from here d'ye say he lives?" asked Alf, after a little pause.

"Three miles' pretty near the mark, I guess."

"Let's go for him, straight, George! Good by, old man; see you again 'fore you're many days older. But first thing we do will be to settle with that nigger."

And off the twain started, along the beach, for Zip's hovel, discussing on the way various modes of summary punishment to be inflicted upon the doomed darkey. They were about on the balance between shooting at sight, hanging on the nearest tree or skinning alive, when they reached his hut. But he, with a wise foresight, had saved them the trouble of putting him out of the way. He had left for parts unknown. And they haven't seen him from that day to this.

But, should they ever accidentally pounce upon him, they swear there will be a nigger to bury.

ATHLETES OF JAPAN.

While contemplating the substantial evidence of Japanese generosity, our attention was suddenly riveted upon a body of monstrous fellows who tramped down the beach like so many huge elephants. They were professional wrestlers, and formed part of the retinue of the princes, who kept them for their private amusement and for public entertainment. They were twenty-five in number, and were men enormously tall in stature, and immense in weight of flesh. Their scant costume, which was merely a colored cloth about the loins, adorned with fringes and embiazoned with the armorial bearing of the prince to which each belonged, revealed their gigantic proportions in all the bloated fullness of fat and breadth of muscle. Their proprietors, the princes, seemed proud of them and were careful to show their points to the greatest advantage. Some two or three of these monsters were the most famous wrestlers in Japan, and ranked as the champion "Mace" and "Heenan" of the land. Rojagani, the reputed "bully" of the capital, was one of them, and paraded himself with the conscious pride of superior immensity and strength. He was especially noticed to us, that we might examine his massive form. The commissioner insisted that he should be minutely inspected, that the hardness of his well-rounded muscles should be felt, and that the fatness of his cushioned frame should be tested by the touch. I accordingly attempted to grasp his immense arm which I found as solid as it was huge, and then passed my hand over the monstrous neck (to let him see that I was not nervous) which fell in folds of massive flesh like the dewlap of a prize ox. As some surprise was naturally expressed at this wonderful exhibition of animal developement, the monster himself gave a grunt expressive of his flattered vanity. They were also so immense in flesh that they appeared to have lost distinctive features, and seemed to be only twenty-five masses of fat. Their eyes were barely visible through a long perspective of sooket, the prominence of their noses was lost in the puffiness of their bloated cheeks, and their heads were set almost directly on their bodies, with folds of flesh where the neck and chin are usually found. Their great size, however, was more owing to the development of muscle than to the deposition of fat, for although they were evidently well fed, they were not the less well exercised, and capable of great feats of strength. As a preliminary exhibition of the powers of these men, the princes set them to removing the sacks of rice to a convenient place on the shore for shipping. Each of these sacks weighed not less than one hundred and fifty pounds, and there were only a couple of the wrestlers who did not carry each two sacks at a time. They bore the sacks on the right shoulder, lifting the first from the ground and adjusting it without help, but obtaining aid for the raising of the second. One man carried a sack suspended by his teeth, and another, taking one in his arms, turned repeated summersaults as he held it, and apparently with as much ease as if his flesh had been only so much gossamer, and his load a feather. After this preliminary display, the commissioner proposed that we should accompany him and the party to the treaty house, where we would have an opportunity of seeing the wrestlers exhibit their professional feats. The wrestlers themselves are most carefully provided for, having constantly about them a number of attendants, who were always at hand to supply them with fans, which they often required, and to assist them in dressing and undressing. While at rest, they are ordinarily clothed in richly adorned clothes of the usual Japanese fashion, but when exercising they were stripped naked, with the exception of the cloth about the loins. After their performances with the sacks of rice, their servitors spread upon the bare ground one of the most splendid rich garments, and led them up to the treaty house. A circular space of some twelve feet in diameter had been enclosed within a ring, and the ground carefully broken up and smoothed in front of the building, while in the portico, divans covered with red cloth were arranged for the Japanese commissioners, the commodore, his officers and his various attendants. The bands from the ships were also in attendance, and enlivened the intervals during the performance with occasional lively strains. As soon as the spectators had taken their seats, the naked wrestlers were brought out into the ring, and the whole number being divided into two parts, tramped heavily backward and forward, looking defiance at one another, but not engaging in any contest, as their object was merely to parade their points, to give the beholders, as it were, an opportunity to form an estimate of their comparative powers, and to make up their betting books. They soon retired behind some screens placed for the purpose, where all, with the exception of two, were again clothed in full dress, and took their position on seats in front of the spectators. The two who had been picked out from the band, now, on the signal being given by the heralds who were seated on opposite sides, presented themselves. They came in, one after the other, with slow and deliberate steps, as became such huge animals into the centre of the ring, then they ranged themselves one against the other, at the distance of a few yards. They crouched for a while, eyeing each other with a wary look, as if each were watching for a chance to catch his antagonist off his guard. They were, in fact like a couple of fierce bulls, whose nature they had not only acquired, but even their looks and movements. As they continued to eye each other they stamped the ground heavily, pawning, as it were, with impatience, and then stooping their huge bodies, they grasped handfuls of dirt and tossed it with angry jerk over their backs, or rubbed it impatiently between their giant palms or under their stout shoulders. They now crouched low, still keeping their eyes fixed on each other, and watching every movement, until in an instant they both simultaneously heaved their massive forms in opposing force; body to body, with a force that might have stunned an ox; the equilibrium of their monstrous frames was hardly disturbed by the concussion, the effects of which were but barely visible in the quiver of the hanging flesh of their bodies. As they came together they had thrown their brawny arms around each other, and were now entwined in a desperate struggle, each striving with all his enormous strength to throw his adversary. Their great muscles rose with the distinct outline of the sculptured form of a colossal Hercules, their bloated countenances swelled up with gushes of blood which seemed ready to burst through the skin of their reddened faces, and their huge bodies palpitated with emotion as the struggle continued. At last one of the antagonists fell, with his immense weight, heavily upon the ground, and being declared vanquished, was assisted to his feet and conducted from the ring. The scene now was somewhat varied by a change in the kind of contest between two succeeding wrestlers. The heralds, as before, summoned the antagonists, and one, having taken his place in the ring, assumed an attitude of defence with one leg in advance, as if to steady himself, and his head bent low, with his head lowered, placed in position as if ready to receive an attack. Immediately after in rushed the other, bellowing loudly like a bull, and making at once for the man in the ring, dashed, with his head lowered, and thrust forward against the head of his opponent, who bore the shock with the steadiness of a rock, although the blood streamed down his face from his bruised forehead, which had been struck in the encounter. The attack was repeated again and again, the same one acting always as the opposing and the other as the resisting force; and they kept up their contest until their foreheads were besmeared with blood and the flesh on their chests rose in great tumors from the repeated blows. This spectacle did not terminate until the whole twenty-five, had successively, in pairs, displayed their immense powers and savage qualities.

This yere stone with D. F. cut on it,
Yes! well under that stone, nothin fearin,
A many a day now, more'n a hundred,
Lies Dick Farren—I helped at his berryin.

Queer chap waur Dick, wild and ungracious,
"Dare devil Dick," that's name what he went by;
But sich a heart under his roughness,
Yes, he waur rough, it might be more rowdy.

I've heard as wonst he waur bright as a bee,
And lived east somewhere, a high daddy cove,
And had many a thousand, they say,
Nor waurnt slow to part—but waur cross'd in love.

Big man? not wery big, but waur broad,
And strong! Ah, and no coward, nare a fear,
But waur good in a fight or a muss,
And whear fight waur thickest Dick waur thear.

See that cliff high up in the mountain,
Whear the sunlight shines thro, bright as a gleam,
And waur cosmos some rocks and trash,
And runs down hill, and jines thear with the stream

Well, wonst, jost when the mornin waur grey,
Thear waur Dick wery quiet, takin rest,
While down pass, came Bill Gaines and his wife,
Yes, young man, waur married, jest on her breast.

Dick shouts at Bill, "The river waur full
And runnin fast, a good ten mile or more."
Says Bill, "You be darned for a skunkhead,"
And made horse for the ford below the store.

Dick come down that thear hill like a deer;
He waur sure-foot, and knowed jest whear not to hurt;
He meant savin—kep shoutin at horse—
Too late, down at ford went both horse and cart.

Dick liked the young uns—thear waurnt no bost.
He didn't think nothin, but plunged in the stream,
Saved the young uns, and brought mother safe;
Then went for Bill Gaines, his face all agleam.

Don't know why, but somehow Bill got scared,
And thort Dick meant what waur more than savin',
So he gives him one on head with whip
And sinks him like a stone, so that fixes 'em ravin'.

Lord, to see that fight in the water—
Bill Gaines waur a corp inside a shiver—
And Dick dived, with a screech and a roar,
And sunt deep in the bed of the river.

A week arter, Joe Higgins and me
Went down arter fishin', and found—skin and bone
Poor D. F.—he never meant nothin:
So we put him quiet under that stone.

"SLOUCH."

A High Pressure Sketch (in the Popular Style).

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY "THE MODEST QUENCHER."

He was anything but a romantic looking youth. Clad in rags and holes, loosely fastened together, he looked—unfashionable. He was eight years of age and wore bare feet, dirty bare feet. His mouth looked dangerous for food; his hands looked dangerous for pocket books. His name was Slouch. His name belied not his looks. His nose was surprisingly short, but what little there was of it required considerable work on the crooked part in it, which helped to deteriorate his appearance. He earned a subsistence by sweeping the crossings. He was standing, one day, amusing of himself by a-musing to himself in this strain:—"Bin sweepin' all day and haven't made quite a cent. I'm awful hungry.—" Before he says more, let us inform you that he had eaten only half a morsel all that day. He generally fed from the garbage boxes, but the ash-men had gone around before him on that day. Hence his hunger. He continued, "Oh! how hungry; I could eat anything. Oh! if I only had some broiled coffee and rare toast, I'd——"

He was interrupted, for a female voice, full of gentle sympathy, was heard to exclaim, "Oh! you poor little, cold little beast, don't you feel devilish cold?"

Our hero, on being thus addressed, looked up and blushed. And no wonder, for a sight of terrible loveliness met his eye. The person who addressed him was a beautiful girl. One of those sweet little dears, you know, that we often read of but seldom see. One of those who make it their business to find out all dirty little ragamuffins and furnish them with fortunes. This one was in that line of business. She had a sweet, manly-looking face, and her cerulean eyes were almost as black as the azure green of the crimson grass.

"What's your name, little dirty barefoot?" she asked.

"Slouch, mum."

"What's your first name?"

"Aint got none, cos I was a twin; but my partner in the twin business died, so now I'm a poor orfing. I aint eat nothink for six weeks, and I can't stand so much absence. I'm unfortunit!" Here he snuffled.

In a trice (which is a verr sh rt time) the young lady snuffled also. In fact she became completely dried up in tears.

"Poor boy," she sobbed, "answer me truly and you shall be rewarded. Did you ever tell a lie?"

"What?" said Slouch, his whole form shivering with suppressed emotion at being thus questioned, "do yer suppose such a thing like those?"

"Oh! no," said she, quickly; "I meant not to offend. Excuse me, little dirty nose, and permit me to ask you another question. Would you steal?"

Again Slouch's delicate frame shivered as before. Tears could be seen bursting from his eyes, ears, nose and mouth, as, in a voice choked with emotion and virgin leaf, he said, with that delightfully ungrammatical, "nonorable-poverty" style, peculiar to these little beats, "What! me steal. Oh, pshaw! you can't mean it. No, mum; that is what I wouldn't do, yer see, if I was rejewced to the most horrid depths of degradation. (Hand on his heart.) No, mum, thank heaven, Slouch hasn't come to those yet, although he is unfortiannt." (Here a piece of tear crawls to his eye.) "No, mum," he added, with mercased excitement, "I never yet tried to steal nothink as I know'd to be fetched in, and it shocks me to hear you accuse me; and if you'd please me, don't speak so; ah, don't, now, please, won't you?" and he threw himself on his knees before her. Then, whether from force of habit, or whether he had forgotten what to say next, he ejaculated appealingly, "Black yer boots?"

The young lady replied in the negative and assisted him to rise. She then said:—"Sweet boy, I am sorry. Here." As she spoke she held out a handful of gold dollars with coupons attached. These she dumped in Slouch's hat and then—made off. (A unique expression.) Slouch looked awfully surprised. He looked at the retreating female form and then at the money. Again the same old tear welled up in his eye; again he snuffled, as he said:—"At last I am wealthy. I can now satisfy my poor old mother's wants. She can always have an unlimited supply of gin and sugar!" He turned to go, first taking a last parting glance at the female figure which was making off, as aforesaid. Then, in a stage whisper, he muttered impressively:—"She's a hangel, she is. Yes, indeed, is she. In fact, I have no hesitation in saying that she is a—a gentleman and a scholar!"

We pass to another scene. Many years had down. Look into this room. It bears the unmistakable sign of "shabby genteel." There is but one chair, and that has to answer the purposes of a bed and table. A wife was leaning against a hot stove, crying joyfully. In a corner the husband was resting. He was an invalid—otherwise a sick person. He had had a sad accident. He had caught a measle in his throat from drinking cheap beer! He hadn't worked for a long while. He couldn't, for, being "laid up," he was "laid down," and, consequently, he couldn't "lay low" for anything to do. We have said his married wife was crying joyfully. We knew it before he did, for he just this moment discovered it and asked the cause.

"Oh! Dearest Sylvester!" said she, jumping heavily upon him, "there is some one who is befriending us. Here is another thousand dollar bill. This makes the fourth within one hour. Oh! how curious. I wonder who——"

"Good evening, how-de-do?" said a bashful, retiring voice, coming from the direction of the door. "I see yer done come home more, or less," the husband looked at the intruder. The measled husband's wife gave one frantic, wild exclamation, then two incoherent expressions, then three crys of unutterable joy, then——"Well," said the stranger, "yer dunno me, but I know you. I am Slouch (music for this climax). Years ago, when a poor, young orfing, you came to me and picked me out of the gutter and washed and ironed me, figuratively speaking. You kindled within me," continued Slouch, growing more excited, "a flame which was—a—flame—a flame never to be—a—to—be—no mr-ree—never to—be. You rescued me from the depths of heathen paganism, so to speak, and I thank you for it. Listen. After you left me I invested the cash you gave me. I bought a number of the lives of Jack Sheppard. I followed the tractman in his rounds and succeeded. Where tracts were not welcome Jack Sheppard was. I persevered. I am now rich. I have seven and a few thousand dollars. I now make you a present of this block of houses. Good by—good by. I am bashful and uncouth, but I am good, and always remember my friends, like all the little ragmuffins who get rich (in stories)."

He left. Husband looked at wife. "What a d——d fool, wife."

"Aint he, though," said wife.

MORAL.—Make it a point to help any dirty little wretch you see, and in future time, when you are "broke," they may present you with a block of houses—also, they may—not.

A MIXED GAME.

REPORTED BY "OUR JIM'S" SPORTING FRIEND

First Heat.—Old Beeswax at the willow came up smiling, but a little groggy; getting the word "go," he jawed the balls at the quarter pole in 0:33½, when, by a succession of brilliant moves, he swung his ace and caught the umpire a rib-roaster, but which was muffed by the "short and dirty," push shots being barred; he stole his second, and maintained the lead to the nine hole, where, making a miscue, he lost Jacks and retired to grass in 2:31½.

Second Act.—As Stoolfunk came from his corner the punishment received in the previous round was plainly visible, but, notwithstanding a severe cold, he sang with his usual good taste. Making a splendid burst of speed down the home-stretch, he popped up a daisy-cutter, but went into the pocket, thereby getting the first base in caucery and causing the stroke car to copper the ace. (Tremendous cheering followed and the excitement was intense; and a blanket could have covered the home plate). Nothing daunted, however, he beat to windward, and was finally bowled out in attempting the cross-counter.

Third Innings.—A drizzling rain falling made this an unusually attractive hand. In attempting to harness up his velocipede "Nibsy" was back-heeled, but, nevertheless, made his 52d mile in 4 hours and 38 minutes, scoring but 9 points and leaving them safe. Foul was claimed, but not allowed. Terrific in-fighting followed, every man striving to throw sixes. Old "Step and Fetch it" got to the stake-boat just in time to dodge a wicked lead for the ten spot, when, at this critical juncture, the "Pie-biter" popped out in consequence of a wild throw of O'Shaughnessy to a small but appreciative audience.

Fourth Treat.—This was characterized by disgraceful action throughout and ended in a row. Old Beeswax yelled "keno" so loudly that Nibsy flew the track just in time to detect the foul board stacking the deck; hitting him a "snoli gooster" over the "brain-trap" with a piece of the quarter pole, he gave him and his friends a "lay out." They then made a "grand stand" and the spectators made a "home run." Flattered by the success of their first game they invite challenges from all comers.

INDIAN JUGGLERS.—In No. 45 of the previous volume of the CLIPPER we gave an illustration, with a full account of various feats, as performed by the East Indians. Our object now is not only to endorse the opinions of many professionals, that the Indian may be ranked with the best jugglers of the age, but to give an account of one of their unprecedented and apparently dangerous practices. The troupe, the subjects in question, consisted of two men, a boy, and a little girl, about ten years of age. They had an old wicker basket, containing apparently bits of rope, cloth, a sword and some very primitive wooden cups, which were used for the "thimble rig" trick as a commencement to the performance. Having dispensed with the horrid music usually given as an adjunct to native entertainments, they contented themselves with constant vociferations and gestured one to another. By means of bamboos stuck in the ground, a screen was erected of a truly original character, and the little girl was put inside. In the course of a few minutes, however, the cloth was removed, and she was seen sitting cross-legged upon two supports, formed of a stick and the old sword placed point upwards, with the hilt turned in a hole in the ground. She had her eyes shut, and the audience were told that she was "dead." The bamboos were removed one by one, and, finally, the stick from underneath one of her knees, leaving the child perfectly exposed on all sides, sitting upon the point of the sword. A movement of the figure was perceptible, and she gave every appearance of being rigid and inanimate. The screen was re-adjusted, and the girl brought out perfectly stiff. After a time "she came round," and seemed a little more lively for the exhibition. The boy, then laying on his back on the ground, extended his arms, and placed his open hands on the ground, palms uppermost; the two men stood upon his hands, and he twisted his body under one of his arms, round under the other arm, back to his original position; the hands never moved, and the apparent dislocation of the shoulders and wrists was the most amazing piece of bending and contortion probably ever witnessed with such a weight to support. These people always finish their performances with a loud slap of the hands on each of their arms, which is equivalent to a bow or acknowledgement. The "basket trick" upon the bare ground, and without any covering with a cloth, concluded this performance which had also been interspersed with other ordinary jugglings. The greatest success would probably attend such a night in to-day's country, but these people will not leave the land of their nativity, and those few who have paid visits to England have been spoilt by removing the originality and simplicity of the apparatus they themselves employ.

"CALL A MAN."

Any one who is disposed to try a laugh, will do well to read on.

John Jackson was a very industrious, hard-working man, of twenty-three years. Being the eldest child, and the only son, he had always remained at home, assisting his father upon the farm. John was much respected by every one in the neighborhood, and many a bright-eyed girl had secretly thought she would like to change her name to Mrs. John Jackson. But John was no "ladies' man." The fact was, John was very bashful. He would rather hoe potatoes all day than undergo the ceremony of an introduction to a young lady. Not that John disliked the dear creatures—far from it. We believe that he, in common with all bashful, well-meaning men, entertained the very highest respect and admiration for them. And this, no doubt, was the principal cause of his bashfulness. He felt that they were superior beings, and that he was unworthy to associate with them upon terms of equality. But we cannot stop to moralize.

Nancy Clark was the daughter of a respectable farmer, whose lands adjoined the Jackson farm. Nancy was a pretty, saucy little wench, and she liked John Jackson. When they were children they attended the same school, and as he was a few years her senior, was usually her champion in the childish disputes that arose, and her companion in going and returning. At last, John became so much of a young man as to be kept from school, as she had been in past years. John discovered, too, that he had been growing in stature, and it seemed as if he had been growing out of shape. His feet and legs appeared very awkward; he didn't know what to do with his hands; his face pained him, and, taken all in all, he was inclined to think he was not more than half put together.

Now the truth was, John Jackson was really a fine looking young man, and nothing but his admiration of Nancy could have suggested any such foolish thoughts about himself.

As the novelists say, it was a lovely day in August. The heavens were clear, serene and beautiful; the trees were laden with golden fruit, and the beautiful birds twittered their songs of love in the branches. Earth—(there we've slid down to earth once more; such lofty flights, they make our head dizzy). We were about to say that "earth had yielded her bountiful harvest of a year's grass, and clover, and honeysuckles, which the noble yeomanry of Chesterville had garnered within their storehouses"—but upon second thought, have concluded to word it thus:—"The farmers of Chesterville were done haying."

John Jackson's sister had a quilting that afternoon. His father had gone to "Keith's Mill" to get some wheat ground, and John was left to repair some tools, to be ready on the morrow to commence mowing the meadow grass. Suddenly it occurred to John that if he remained about the house in the afternoon, he would be called in at tea time and required to do the honors of the table. To avoid this, he quietly shouldered his scythe and stole away to the meadow, half a mile distant, fully resolved that he would not leave there until it was so dark that he could not see to mow, and thus avoid seeing the girls.

The meadow was surrounded on all sides by a thick forest, which effectually shut out what little breeze there might be stirring. The sun poured its rays as though the little meadow was the focus point where the heat was concentrated. John mowed and sweat—sweat and mowed, until he was obliged to sit down and cool off. Then it occurred to John that if he took off his pants he might be much more comfortable. There could be no impropriety in it, for he was entirely concealed from observation, and there was not the slightest reason to suppose that he could be seen by any person.

So John stripped off, and with no cover save his linen—commonly called a shirt—he resumed his work. He was just congratulating himself upon the good time he was having, and the lucky escape he had made from meeting the girls, when he chanced to disturb a huge black snake, a genuine twister, with a white ring around his neck.

John was no coward, but he was mortally afraid of a snake. "Self preservation" was the first "passage" that flashed upon John's mind, and "legs take care of the body" was the next. Dropping his scythe, and spinning round like a top, he was ready to strike a 2:40 gait, when at that moment the snake was near enough to hook his crooked teeth into John's shirt, just above the hem. With a sudden spring, he started off with the speed of a locomotive. He first jumped the snake clear from the ground, and as John stole a hasty glance over his shoulders, he was horrified to find the reptile securely fastened to the extremity of his garment; while the speed with which he rushed forward kept the serpent extended at an angle of ninety degrees with his body.

Here was a quandary. If he stopped, the snake would coil about his body and squeeze the life to death; if he continued the race he'd soon fall, from sheer exhaustion. On he flew, scarce daring to think how his dreadful race would end. Instinctively he had taken the direction of home, when a feeling of security came over him. Suddenly flashed across his mind the true state of affairs—his father gone—the quilting—and worst of all, the girls! This new horror sent the blood back, curdling about his neck, and he came to a halt. The next moment he felt the body of the cold, clammy monster in contact with his bare legs, his tail creeping around them in a sort of oozing way, as though his snakeship only meditated a little fun, by way of tickling John upon the knees.

This was too much for human endurance. With a yell, such as man never utters save when in mortal terror, poor John again set forward at break-neck pace, and once more had the pleasure of seeing the snake resume his horizontal position, some what after the fashion of a comet.

On, on he flew! John forgot the quilting, forgot the girls, forgot everything but the snake.

His active exercises (he paid particular attention to his running), together with the excessive heat, had brought on the nose bleed, and as he ran, ears erect and head thrown back, his chin, throat and shirt-bosom were stained with the downing stream.

His first wild shriek had startled the quilters, and forth they rushed, wondering if some mad Indian was not prowling about. By this time John was within a few rods of the barn, still running at the top of his speed, his head turned so that he could keep one eye on the snake, and with tae other observe what course he must take. The friendly barn concealed him from the sight of the girls. He knew they were in the yard, having caught a glimpse of them as they rushed from the house. A few more bounds and he would be in their midst. For a moment modesty overcame fear, and he once more halted. The snake, evidently pleased with his rapid transportation, manifested his gratitude by attempting to enfold the legs of our hero within his embrace.

With an explosive "ouch!" and urged forward by "circumstances over which he had no control," poor John bounded on. The next moment he was in full view of the girls, and as he turned the corner of the barn, the snake came round with a whiz, something after the fashion of a coach whip.

Having reached the barn-yard, to his dismay he found the bars up; but time was too precious to be wasted in letting down bars. Gathering all his strength, he bounded into the air—snake ditto—and as he alighted on the other side, his snakeship's tail cracked across the upper bar, snapping like an India cracker.

Again John set forward, now utterly regardless of the presence of the girls, for the extra tick of the snake's tail as he leaped the bars, banished all his bashfulness and modesty, and again he had the pleasure of finding the snake in a straight line, drawing steadily at the hem of his solitary garment.

The house now became the centre of attraction, and around it he revolved with the speed of thought. Four times in each revolution as he turned the corner, his snakeship came around with a whiz which was quite refreshing.

While describing the third circle, as he came near the group of wonder-struck girls, without removing his gaze from the snake, he managed to cry out:—

"CALL A MAN!"

The next moment he whisked out of sight, and, as quick as thought, re-appeared on the other side of the house—

"CALL A MAN!"

And away he whirled again, turning the corner so rapidly that the whiz of the snake sounded half-way between a whistle and the repeated pronunciation of double-e.

Before either of the girls had stirred from their tracks, he had performed another revolution—

"CALL A MAN!"

Away he flew, but his strength was rapidly falling. Nancy Clark was the first to recover her presence of mind, and seizing a hoop-pole, she took her station near the corner of the house, and, as John re-appeared, she brought it down upon the snake with a force that broke his back and his hold upon John's mother garment at the same time.

John rushed into the house and to his room, and at tea time appeared in his best Sunday suit, but little the worse for the race, and to all appearance cured of bashfulness. That night he walked home with Nancy Clark. The New Year they were married, and now, whether John feels inclined to laugh at his wife's hoop, or any other peculiarity, she has only to say, "call a man," when he instantly sobers down.

J. W. R., St. Louis, Mo.—1. Church street extends further south than Fulton now, and it is the intention to open it through to the Battery. 2. The Central Hotel on Broadway is the largest. 3. The Girard Hotel, located on the corner of Broadway and 41st street, is seven stories in height. 4. Pearl street extends across Broadway, the City Hospital has been torn down and the street runs through a part of the ground. 5. "As you were."

R. J. P., Sergnio.—A pool seller is often commissioned to purchase pools on horses by the owners or other parties, but the practice ought to be checked, and a pool auctioneer not allowed to bid at all. In the case you mention, the remedy is easy, viz., by starting an opposition business, and charging 3 per cent on the winnings, a commission ample enough.

F. S. A.—Theodore Hamilton was born in Baltimore, Md., Nov. 24, 1839, made his first appearance at the Holiday Street Theatre, in Baltimore, Sept. 20th 1858, in the character of Lord Hume, in the play entitled the "King of the Commons," made his first appearance in New York at Wallack's Theatre, Aug. 1868, as Col. Chatsworth, in the "Two Pic."

Hen. M., Cincinnati, O.—Tom Byrne fought M. Haydon at Paysmount, Dublin, Ireland, Jan. 24, 1840, being disturbed by the police. On Feb. 7th they met again, but were again disturbed. In their third meeting at Snake Inn, Derby, April 5th, 1842, Haydon won.

F. R. H.—We would not advise you to go upon the stage. You will find it exceedingly laborious, and it will be difficult to gain a prominent position. Years would elapse ere you could receive as much as your present business pays you, which you would probably lose by adopting the stage. You had better join some good amateur society for a time, and should your desire still continue to go upon the regular stage, you could then do so.

Subscriber, Brentland, Colorado.—1. A having bet that he would bet on a certainty is valid if fraud has not been used to induce the adversary to bet. 3. The matter you refer to was of a different character.

Constant Reader, Boston.—1. Grace and variety of evolutions. 2. Can't say. 3. Yes; "Physical Exercises," by Prof. Wood, gives all necessary information upon the subject. You can procure it by enclosing $2.50 to Ed. James, whose address find among our advertisements.

H. A. R.—The Red Stockings have the best record for 1870 thus far, on the 15th having as yet been beaten them a series of games. The Athletics stand second in regard to games lost, the Mutuals third, the Atlantics fourth, and the Chicago Club fifth.

Pere, Wellsville, N. Y.—1. The longest standing jump on record is 12 feet 4½ inches. The record is held by Ned Searles. 2. Bob Way's longest jump in public is 12ft. 11¾in., made in his match with Searles.

Kiker, Boston.—A, who bet that you had never seen a man with a wooden leg walk without a stick, loses the wager; his "catch" does not save him from the penalty of his over-rashness, and instead of "catching" you, you "stick" him.

John Almond.—You will have to do much better before you can make a play successful; you have some pretty good ideas, and time may develop what little talent you possess; you should be more careful in getting up your manuscript.

R. W.—1. Cyrille Dion played John Deery for the champion cue and Rudolphe, which was played in this city in May last, was for the champion cue.

I. S., Jr., Montezuma.—1. Dexter had the running mare, Charlotte B., to beat him when he made 2:17¾, at Buffalo. A new census is being taken for New York, and the amount of population will soon be announced.

Chief Co., Elk.—If the association advertised that a horse distancing the field was only entitled to the first money, you cannot claim the second money also. If they did not do so, you are entitled to both first and second money.

Champion Muffler.—James Wright, who he is the catcher of the Cleveland nine. There was another White who played at right field, but we do not remember his first name.

Judge Clark, the counsel for the defendants, interposed a plea of "guilty," and, in the absence of the prosecutor, sentence was suspended. It is to be hoped that our contemporaries will get along more amicably together in future, and we also trust that the sentence may be suspended altogether.

AT THE RACES.

To witness the races at Jerome Park, on Saturday last, there assembled a concourse of representatives of every class of society. There was the minister, the lawyer, the physician, the congressman, the burglar, the mechanic, the actor, the newsboy, the state senator, the bootblack, the editor, the sneak thief, the reporter, the soldier—in fact, every phase of high and low life was fitly represented; and the school girl, fresh from her lessons, was there; and alongside of her could be seen the frail sister, casting out her lines to catch the fish; there, too, was the dignified and matronly mother of a happy family prancing round with the richly-harnessed keeper of an assignation house on Fifth Avenue, neither aware of the other's status in society. Behold, too, that gorgeously caparisoned lady in blue, with lace overskirt, and penciled eyebrows, inquiring of a sedate-looking gentleman in black the name of the leading horse—that lady is the mistress of one of the most noted counterfeiters in the profession; the gentleman is one of the pillars of the church—the "turf levels all distinctions," you will observe. And yet this promiscuous crowd is seemingly well disposed and orderly, and social enjoyment is apparently the aim of all. There stands the representative of Britain's muscular Christianity, clad in a velvet coat and the latest style of tile; he doesn't look like a man-eater, does he, with his soft expression and gentle manner, and voice low as the cooing of the turtle dove? Nor would you take that dark-muzzled, large featured gentleman beside him for the son of Thespis who does the lovers and juveniles at one of our leading theatres—neither is he; that black-muzzled, loud-voiced creature is a representative of the press, seeking whom and what he may devour. Oh, it's a grand place to see society in all its greatness and glory, is the race track. See that luscious looking, dark-eyed beauty eating crackers and cheese! That girl's father keeps an oyster stall "way down by Bowling Green," and Susan is her name—this is "Susan's Sunday out;" those eyes sell many an oyster stew, and that smile doth many a broil beguile. Would you learn more? That richly clad gentleman you see counting out greenbacks is clerk in a dry goods establishment—his salary, twenty-five hundred a year, Gaffer Green, and yet he spends twenty thousand a year on wine, women and the hosts o' Faro? How does he get it? Echo answers—"get it." And that young lady who smiles so sweetly on those around her carriage, with a kind word for this admirer, a glance of the eye for that and a gentle pressure of the tips of her delicate fingers for another—would you think that within that softly undulating breast there is a heart as black as night, a heart familiar with every phase of wickedness and crime—would you believe it? Let us turn from this scene of duplicity and deceit. Ah! what have we here? A gentleman "going through" another gentleman's well stuffed wallet, while the latter's gaze and thoughts are intently fixed upon the contending steeds and their riders; but the police arrangements are so complete, you will observe, that a cop has got him and his plunder already in custody. But see! What means that rush, that avalanche of humanity? The race is over and the congregation is going to take a drink—"only this, and nothing more!"

"The People's Lawyer."—That rising young lawyer, John G. Boyd, Esq. (who has his office in the Clipper building), has already gained an enviable reputation in the profession he has chosen, and his practice is daily increasing, owing to the ability with which he conducts the business of his clients, to the honesty and reliability of his advice and to his reasonable charges. One of his latest successes was the case of the murderer Glass, whose neck he saved from the gallows, as may be seen from the following article, which appeared in the Daily News of Sept. 20th:—

The management of the defence of John Glass, the murderer of Henry Wachter, in the Court of Over and Terminer, was a success on the part of the prisoner's counsel. The atrocity of the crime, the abundance and clearness of the evidence for the prosecution, and, above all, the prisoner's own admission of the deed, apparently left Glass no chance of escape from the gallows. Mr. Boyd was only retained in the case on the day previous to the trial, and had no time to make any preparations; but the ingenious manner in which, on cross-examination, he turned the evidence of the witnesses for the people to the advantage of his client, showed that he was quite equal to the emergency. His cross-examination of the medical witness evinced, on his part, a knowledge of anatomy seldom possessed by lawyers. The courteous and becoming manner in which he pleaded the poor, friendless and unfortunate man's cause, left a favorable impression upon the mind of the jury, and his dignified appeal to the sympathies of the jury on his behalf, did himself lasting credit and undoubtedly saved the neck of John Glass from the hangman's rope.

"The Retired Physician," whose "sands of life" ran out here several years ago, has turned up in London, where he is now doing consumptive people Brown as "a grateful father, whose daughter was restored to perfect health, after having been given up," et cetera. The old sand man is making much money by "sending a copy of the prescription free to all."

The Seat of War ought to be a very clean place, for the Prussians are scouring it every day. The belligerants have gone into the toilet business, too, each doing his best to give the other a good dressing. Our opinion is that one of them stands a fair chance for a thorough war-drubbing.

All New York is anxious to be "millionaires," and to that end every body is assisting Marshal Sharpe to count up our population to a million. Thus far things look favorable. Had a professional politician had the taking of the census in this city we should have had no difficulty in getting at the right figures at first.

"They Say" that they are suffering from the want of salt in Metz, and yet they are in a nice pickle, and seem to be pretty well peppered, too.

"Our Jim" declares that part of the Prussian army carry "yard-arms." The boy had been reading about their having short guns, three feet in length.

Death of Superintendent Jourdan.—Very many of our readers, personal friends, as well as those who know of the man only through services rendered to the public at large, will receive with deep regret the intelligence communicated by this paragraph—that Superintendent John Jourdan, the hard working, efficient and talented head of the police force of the metropolis, is no more, having breathed his last at his residence, in this city, at 11 o'clock, A. M., on Oct. 10th, after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Jourdan was born in the Sixth ward, New York, on the 6th, 1831, and was, consequently, nearly forty years of age at the period of his demise. At the age of eleven years he commenced the battle of life, being employed in the mailing department of the Herald, and subsequently in the Sun and Tribune offices, his position being that of foreman in the latter establishment. A position on the police force being offered him in 1853, he accepted it and became attached to the Sixth Precinct as patrolman, performing post duty under Captain (now commissioner) Brennan, and detailed duty in charge of the Tombs Police Court. When the Metropolitan Police Department came into existence Jourdan retired to private life, but upon Mayor Tieman's installation he accepted a position which was offered him, and shortly afterwards was assigned to duty as a detective under then Capt. Joseph Dowling, in the Sixth Precinct. In 1860 he was promoted to the sergeantcy of this district, where he had made many warm friends. Upon the elevation of Mr. Dowling to the position of Police Justice, the Commissioners appointed Sergt. Jourdan to fill the vacancy thus created, and subsequent events have proven that a more fitting selection could not have been made. He possessed in an eminent degree those qualities which are requisite in a good detective officer, and became widely known through his successful efforts to ferret out and bring to justice the perpetrators of various crimes. In June of the present year he was appointed to the office of superintendent of the municipal police, the duties of which he discharged faithfully, devoting thereto all his energies. The effect of his close application to the onerous duties of the position began ere long to manifest itself, however, and after being compelled to take one or two brief seasons of relaxation, he was stricken down, and for sometime prior to his death was confined to his room. It is thought that the exertions he made to unravel the mystery surrounding the Nathan murder, hastened his death. As a detective officer, he was acknowledged to be without a superior, if he had an equal in this country, and his death is a loss not only to his family, personal friends and this community, but to the entire country.

PEDESTRIANISM.

Bingham Defeats Burgess.—There was a good sized assemblage at the spot near the Brockton Club House, Toronto, C. W., selected for the race between Wm. Bingham, of Bradford, and Thomas Burgess, of Woodstock, for the championship of Canada, 75 yds., on the 8th inst. The time announced for starting was three o'clock, but owing to the difficulty in agreeing upon some person to act as starter, it was delayed for two hours. Mr. Carson, of Toronto, acted as judge for Bingham, and John W. Cozad, for Burgess, Mr. Crawford officiating as referee. Burgess was trained by J. W. Cozad and Ben Crandell, while Bingham took his breathings under the eye of Wm. H. Young, of Philadelphia. Both stripped well, and Burgess, who is the elder (Bingham is quite a youth), was the favorite at odds of 100 to 70. Crandell was on the score with the latter, while Young performed a like office for his charge. After twenty minutes had been passed in scoring they got away, Bingham leading from the start and finally winning by nine feet in 7 seconds, 'tis said.

Way vs. Searles.—No match has yet been made between these men for the title of champion jumper, now possessed by Searles, who was challenged by Way last week. Agreeable to appointment made by Bob, Searles called upon us on the 6th inst., but as Way did not attend nothing was done. It appears that Bob was prevented coming to the city on the date fixed upon, and they have agreed to meet at this office on the 11th inst., between 1 and 2 o'clock, to sign articles.

The Championship Cup still remains in the possession of Jas. Smith. He says he gave Adams $5 full value in greenbacks. Good! James says he's ready to tramp against anybody from one to one hundred miles, for from $100 to $1,000 a side.

Jack Scaffard is credited with having recently accomplished the arduous task of walking 72 consecutive hours without sleep or rest, at 8th Francisco, Cal., standing on the ironwork of the 1st flat, when he presented a pitiable spectacle, his body being considerably swollen.

CRICKET.

YOUNG AMERICA vs. PHILADELPHIA.

The first of a new series of games between the Young America and Philadelphia Cricket Clubs was played on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 7th and 8th, on the ground of the former at Germantown. The game was commenced at 3 P. M. on Friday—the weather being very chilly and disagreeable—and when the stumps were drawn at 5:30, P. M., the Young Americas—who went first to the bat—had scored 122 runs for the loss of only four wickets, Dan Newhall being not out for 34. The following day Dan Newhall, by lively and hard hitting, increased his individual score to 90, in which were a splendid hit for 6, two 5s, two 4s, nine 3s, twelve 2s. 277 runs were made before the last cricket of the Young America fell. Harry Newhall, 34; Johns, 29; Bob Newhall, 29; John Large, 28, and Stocker, 20, were the principal contributors that helped Dan Newhall to increase the score to the large total of 277. The Philadelphias were quickly disposed of for 54 in their first innings, E. Hopkinson, who obtained 13, being the only man to get double figures. The Philadelphias, being 223 runs behind their opponents, had to follow their innings, and were all disposed of for 76, thus leaving the Young American winners in one innings and 147 runs to spare. Waterman, Law and Clay displayed some good hitting in their innings in making their respective scores of 27, 17 and 13. The weather on Saturday was warm, and a large number of persons were assembled to witness the game. The Young Americas on Thursday and Friday next will play a strong eleven selected from the English "talent" resident in this country, both professional and amateur. Judging from the play lately exhibited by the Young America, it will take a very strong team to make even a creditable game. The following is the score:—

The Grand International Match.—The close of the cricket season of 1870 will be marked by one of the most interesting contests seen for years past, the occasion being a grand match between the first eleven of the Young America Club, of Germantown—all "native and to the manner born"—and eleven resident English players, the majority of whom will be professionals. The match takes place on the grounds of the Young America Club, Germantown, on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 13th and 14th. The eleven of the Young America Club will include Messrs. H. Newhall, C. Newhall, G. Newhall, D. Newhall, R. Newhall, Large, Baird, Johns, Gummy, Pease and Bussier. The English eleven will include the following professionals of the Germantown, Philadelphia, St. George-New York and Willow Clubs, viz.:—McIntyre, Pearson, Norley, Carpenter and the brothers Eastwood. The amateurs of the English eleven will be Messrs. Cooper, Rogerson, Byron, Bance and Stead. We shall send a special reporter and have the full details in our next.

THE TURF.

Jerome Park Races.

SECOND DAY—SATURDAY, OCT. 8TH.

Remorseless Wins the Jerome Stakes, Glenelg the Maturity Stakes, Judge Curtis the Mile Heat Maturity Stakes, Judge Curtis the Mile Heat, Edgerton the Selling Race and Julius the Hurdle Race.

Glorious weather, genial racing and a large attendance were the features of the second day at Jerome Park. There was an abundant programme of sport provided, for five races, including a hurdle race, were on the card. The first event was won by Mr. F. Morris with Remorseless, one of that family sprung from the union of imported Eclipse and the old mare Barbarity, which have all proven such flyers. This race was for the Jerome Stakes, exclusively for fillies, over a mile and three quarters, and the stake was well worth winning, amounting to $4,250, a sum which will go a long way in paying training expenses, entrance money, etc. The stable were enabled to get their money on to advantage, for the winner had performed so indifferently in the Kenner Stakes, at Saratoga, that the public ran away with the impression that she had irrecoverably lost her great two year old form and they did not much fancy her for this race. Senator Genet and a few of the followers of the stable backed her pretty strongly and landed a good stake by her victory. The favorite was Price McGrath's filly Susan Ann, trained by Tom Patterson along with Helmbold, and she owed her position in the betting market to a satisfactory trial run she had had with that horse a few days before. She run she had had with that horse a few days before. She figured most ingloriously in the race, and Helmbold's running in the Maturity Stakes with Glenelg explained how the mistake had been caused, for the trial horse himself was out of fix. Lady Petry was at one time the favorite, and but for her overpowering her rider and making the running at a pace certain to pump her out before the finish, it is quite possible she might have won the race. As it was, the Baltimore stable of Bowie & Hall came near repeating with their filly, My Maryland, another of those surprises they are so partial to, as in the case of Richmond for the Jersey Derby in 1865, Baltimore for the Three Year Old Stake at Saratoga, and Legatee for the Restoration Stakes at Long Branch.

The Maturity Stakes, for four year olds, was reduced to a match, out of the twenty horses entered, between Helmbold and Glenelg, and their meeting was regarded with the deepest interest. Helmbold had beaten him twice before, but on the last occasion Glenelg had run him very closely, after losing a great deal of ground at the start, that many good judges believed he would have won if he had got off on even terms. Betting ran high, for the Belmont stable pluckily backed their representative, and, as is well known, money is not wanting in that quarter. The repulse of the owner of Helmbold gave confidence to the followers of his stable by loudly proclaiming his willingness to bet $1,000 to $700 that he won to a moral amount, and in the numerous pools sold a made better odds were obtainable, Helmbold selling for $1,500 and $1,000 against

FIRST STAR VICTORY OVER THE ATLANTICS.

THEIR FIRST CONTESTS TEN YEARS AGO.

AN INTERESTING RECORD.

Saturday, Oct 8th, 1870, was a noteworthy day in the calendar of the Star Club, of Brooklyn, for on that day they obtained their first victory over the Atlantic Club, having previously striven in vain since 1859 to win a ball from the old champions. As a matter of interesting record we give below the score of the first match played between the Star and Atlantic clubs, which took place on the old Excelsior grounds, foot of Court street, Brooklyn, October 19th, 1859, viz.:—

Passed balls—Boerum, 27, on 8 of which bases were run; Tracy, 6. Catches on the fly were missed by Oliver, Boerum and Smith, also by F. Whiting, Flanly, Ticknor and Creighton, and one on the bound by Tracy. F. O'Brien struck out once. Umpire—Mr. Gelston, of the Eagle club. Scorers—Messrs. Moore and Hopkins.

At that period the bound catch of fair balls was in vogue. The return match was not played until 1860, when the two clubs met at Bedford, and this time the boys got badly whipped. A feature of the game was the play of "little Bob Manly," as he was then called, at third base, the crowd applauding him heartily throughout. We append the score of the match, copied from the record on our own score book, which shows bases on hits, something not then recognized by the fraternity:—

Umpire—Mr. Thomas S. Daken, of the Putnam Club. Time of game—2 hours and 30 minutes.

From the above record it will be seen that but two of the present Atlantic nine—C. Smith and Pearce—took part in the old games, and but one of the original Stars—Bob Manly. The Stars did not play the Atlantics again until 1864, when they were twice defeated. In 1865 they lost another game, and also in 1866. In 1867 the Stars sustained defeat twice, their nine, this season, including Thomson, Sullivan, Wadsell, Tom Macdonald, Manly, Flanders, Johnson, Worth and Rogers. In 1868 they were again easily defeated; but in 1869 they gave the Atlantics a close push for victory, the first game resulting in a score of 14 to 10 only, the second in a score of 27 to 22, and a third in a score of 17 to 13. The Stars opened play this season by defeating a picked nine by a score of 27 to 8, in which five of the Atlantics played.

THE FIRST VICTORY—SATURDAY'S GAME.

The contest of Oct. 8, 1870, was entered upon under circumstances favorable for the success of the Stars, the Atlantics being short-handed.

The game began at 3.20, with the Atlantics at the bat. Pearce took his base on 3 balls, after which Smith was beautifully caught by Hicks on a fly tip, and Pearce, off his base, was caught out by Beavens. Chapman also popped up a high one which Cummings dropped, thereby saving the Atlantics from a whitewash. Ferguson then hit a long ball for 3 bases and brought in Pearce and Fergo took Hall then took his base on 3 balls, after which Pike hit a ball to Mori Rogers, which he fielded nicely, and the innings was ended.....On the other side Rogers led off with a safe hit, but by Hicks' hit to Smith, Rogers was forced out. The next three strikers batted well for their base, and after Beavens had taken his base on three balls, Worth also hit well for his, but the next two being put out the innings closed for the three runs scored, two being earned. This left the Stars in the field, and as the Atlantics had but eight men in the field, and were without the services of Zettlein, the chances were decidedly favorable for a Star victory.

In the second innings McDonald led off with a safe hit, but Pearce fouled out. Two put outs and a strike out left four bases, and three runs were scored before the innings ended, two being earned..... On the other side more good batting led to a score of 5, the innings closing with the totals at 6 to 5 in favor of the Stars.

The third innings resulted in a blank for the Atlantics and a score of 8 for the Stars, leaving the totals at 14 to 5 in favor of the boys. It is not worth while to refer in detail to the remainder of the innings, inasmuch as both sides muffed considerably all the way through. Suffice it to say that the Stars managed to retain the lead to the close, despite a rally made by the Atlantics in the seventh innings, the contest finally winding up by the totals of 18 to 9, a score which plainly shows the poor character of the play. The full score below gives all details:—

THE GEORGIA CHAMPIONSHIP.

A match game for the championship of Georgia and a gold mounted bat was played at the Georgia State Fair, Macon, Ga., on the 6th inst., between the Blue Stockings, of Savannah, and the Olympics, of Macon, and which resulted in favor of the Savannah Blue Stockings by the following score:—

WHITE STOKINGS VS. ACTIVES.—The white hosed men played a game on the afternoon of the 7th inst., at Ogden Park, with the Chicago Actives, who are the champion juniors of the state, defeating them by a score of 20 to 2, in nine innings, made as follows:—

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Chicago	5	3	4	1	2	4	3	0	0—0

The occasion, so says the Chicago Evening Journal, was rendered unusually interesting by the presentation to each member of the White Stocking eleven of a beautiful gold badge, the gift of President Gassette. The badge is a superb affair—probably the neatest and most expensive thing ever adopted as a club insignia. It is of solid, 18-karat gold, and the design was original with the donor. It consists of a handsomely engraved plate, with pin attached, the name of each recipient being engraved upon the face. From this extends a pretty blue ribbon, the clasp being ornamented with the letters "W. S.," in tasteful monogram in relief, together with the inscription of the White Stocking motto:—"We strive for victory." Attached to the lower end of the ribbon is the miniature diamond field, with the letters "C. B. C." occupying the respective angles, while a pair of tiny bats, crossed, and with a gold chain attached to either end, swaying a gold ball about the size of a pea, completes the ornament. The weight of the badge is eight penny-weight of pure gold, and the cost of each was about $26.

THE PROPOSED GRAND TOURNAMENT.—We regret to notice that the proposition of the Mutual Club to test their right to the whip pennant by the issue of a series of contests in a grand championship tournament, does not exactly meet the views of the clubs named by the Mutuals as their opponents in the tourney. The Chicago press objects almost in toto, and the Atlantics also object to two of the regulations. The general opinion seems to favor the rule of single games, as set forth in the CLIPPER last spring, when the tourney was first proposed. According to this rule—the only fair one for any base ball tourney—the five clubs would play as follows:—

Mutual vs. Red Stockings, Athletic, White Stockings and Atlantic 4
Red Stockings vs. Athletic, White Stockings and Atlantic..... 3
Athletic vs. White Stockings and Atlantics..... 2
White Stockings vs. Atlantic..... 1
Total..... 10

This is the same arrangement as we proposed last spring for the four clubs then named. We hope the above clubs will come to some arrangement, for all desire to see the championship question fairly settled this season.

THE JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP.—The attention of all junior clubs is directed to the following:—

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1870.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—The Putnam Club, of Troy, hereby wins the silver ball and Junior Championship of the United States from the Tuxis and Bailey Club, of Brooklyn, we would most respectfully invite all junior Association clubs to compete with us for that title. As it is getting late in the season we would like to have clubs who intend to play us send in their challenge and name the day. Our season closes Nov. 1st. All communications will be promptly answered. Respectfully yours,

W. FRANCIS, Sec. Putnam B. B. C.

ATLANTIC VS. YALE.—The College players of old Yale will visit Brooklyn, Oct. 19th, to play the Atlantics on the Capitoline grounds, when a good game may be expected.

FOREST CITY, OF CLEVELAND vs. RED STOCKINGS.

THE REDS IN A TIGHT PLACE.

A game between the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, and the Red Stockings, was played on the Union Grounds, Cincinnati, on the 8th, which resulted in a scant victory for the Reds in the ninth innings by a run of good fortune, joined to their excellent staying qualities. This was the fourth game this season between these clubs, the Reds having won them all by scores of 12 to 2, 24 to 10, 27 to 22, and now 18 to 15. The Cincinnatis, on this occasion, played their full nine for the first time since George Wright was injured, the latter player going to the left field until the eighth innings, when he changed positions with Leonard. The Clevelanders batted well, but it was noticeable that all of their runs were made off Brainard, nothing being scored after Harry Wright commenced to pitch, in the seventh innings. The Clevelanders made four to their opponents' one in the first innings, the Reds fielding rather loosely, and at the end of the fifth innings the score stood 6 to 5 in favor of the visitors. As the interest of the game culminated in the last half, we give a detailed report of the last four innings:—

Sixth Innings.—Allison, of Cleveland, sent a high fly to left field, which G. Wright failed to get. Carleton made first on a bounder down at the plate which ran off foul, sending Allison to third. Pratt hove up a fly in right centre, which McVey captured handsomely. J. White took first base and then second on slow handling, Allison and Carleton scoring. A wild pitch let in J. White. Heubel was then filed by McVey. E. White got to third on a bounder which went over G. Wright's head. Sutton and Parker followed with safe hits, White scoring. The others were left, as McVey finished the innings by taking in Kimball's fly, having thus put all three out.....H. Wright was nicely taken on the foul fly by J. White. Leonard reached second on a sharp daisy cutter between Kimball's legs, which the latter missed. Brainard fell victim at first to Kimball's fielding. Sweasy sent home Leonard by a good hit to centre, taking first, and go around to 3d on a passed ball, another one letting him home. McVey on foul. Two runs, and the score 10 to 5 in favor of Cleveland.

Seventh Innings.—J. Allison hit wildly to centre for his base, as did also Carleton. Allison reached the home plate on Pratt's hit and Carleton on J. White's. The latter stole second. Leonard took Heubel's fly nicely. E. White cleared the bases and took second himself on a fine foul to left. The elegant batting of the Clevelanders now necessitated the changing of H. Wright to the pitcher's position, Brainard going to centre. Sutton got a base through Sweasy's fault and Parker fairly earned one. E. White scoring. Gould put out Harry with a foul fly. Allison was fielded out at first by Leonard, the change in pitching having worked well. Five runs.....G. Wright took a base on a short fly to centre; Leonard, who ran for him, succeeded in stealing to third and scored on Gould's hit to right field. The latter got around to third on a very wild throw of Pratt towards Carleton. Waterman obtained first on slow handling by Sutton of his grounder and stole second. J. White making such a wild throw that Gould and Waterman both came home. Allison went to first on called balls and stole second. A change was now made, J. White pitching, E. White catching, Pratt going to short and Parker to right. Two successive wild pitches gave Allison a score, and H. Wright went to first on called balls, but was run out between first and second, after having been caught napping at first by J. White. At this point the umpire ruled out White's pitching as being an underhrow, and he and Pratt changed positions. Leonard was fielded by Kimball, and the next moment Brainard was also. Four runs and a score of 15 to 9.

Eighth Innings.—Sutton was taken on the foul fly by Waterman. Pratt was stopped at 1st by Sweasy's throw. G. Wright and Leonard changed to their old positions. J. White hit safely for a base. A throw to 1st by Allison gave White third, but he was left there, as Heubel hit to Waterman, and the latter fielded him out at first..... Sweasy hit a grounder through Kimball's legs, and took second. McVey threw two bases on a drive to left, letting Sweasy home. A passed ball gave McVey third. G. Wright hit to Kimball, and suffered at first. Gould took three bases on a drive to right, and a wild pitch let him in. Waterman was taken on the fly by Heubel. Allison earned two bases on an elegant drive to right centre. H. Wright sent home Allison and himself reached 2d on a corker to left. Leonard sent Harry home on a good hit to right. Brainard hit to right field, but Parker muffed his fly, and Leonard got home, thus ending the game, Sweasy was taken on the foul bound by Parker, and the ninth innings began with a tie score, 15 to 15.

Ninth Innings.—E. White hit to Sweasy and managed to reach first, as the ball bounded too high. But he went out the next moment by a doubling up process, Sutton hitting to G. Wright at short, who passed the ball to Sweasy, and the latter sent it to Gould. Parker made his base safely, but was left, as Kimball was taken on the fly by H. Wright, a whitewash thus resulting...McVey hit over 3d and made his base, G. Wright advancing him to 3d on a safe hit. Gould was filed by Kimball, Waterman cleared the bases and took second on a crack to centre, which the fielders could not see in time, owing to darkness. Allison went out on a foul fly by E. White. H. Wright got 3d on a low throw of Sutton's, but was left, as Leonard was fielded out at first by Kimball, the game closing with a hit to centre for Cincinnati boys of three runs. The score was as follows:—

ON THE HALF SHELL.

The third and deciding game for the championship of Utah was played at Ogden City on the 1st inst., between the Kuneas, of Salt Lake City, and the Corinne, of Corinne, the latter winning by a score of 12 to 8.....The second and decisive game between the White Stockings, of River Point, and the Silver Heels, of Natick, R. I., was won on the 4th inst. by the former, who caught out by Beavens. Chapman also popped up a high one which Cummings dropped, thereby saving the Atlantics from a whitewash. Ferguson then hit a long ball for 3 bases and brought in Pearce and Fergo took Hall then took his base on 3 balls, after which Pike hit a ball to Mori Rogers, which he fielded nicely, and the innings was ended.....On the other side Rogers led off with a safe hit, but by Hicks' hit to Smith, Rogers was forced out. The next three strikers batted well for their base, and after Beavens had taken his base on three balls, Worth also hit well for his, but the next two being put out the innings closed for the three runs scored, two being earned. This left the Stars in the field, and as the Atlantics had but eight men in the field, and were without the services of Zettlein, the chances were decidedly favorable for a Star victory.

In the second innings McDonald led off with a safe hit, but Pearce fouled out. Two put outs and a strike out left four bases, and three runs were scored before the innings ended, two being earned..... On the other side more good batting led to a score of 5, the innings closing with the totals at 6 to 5 in favor of the Stars.

The third innings resulted in a blank for the Atlantics and a score of 8 for the Stars, leaving the totals at 14 to 5 in favor of the boys. It is not worth while to refer in detail to the remainder of the innings, inasmuch as both sides muffed considerably all the way through. Suffice it to say that the Stars managed to retain the lead to the close, despite a rally made by the Atlantics in the seventh innings, the contest finally winding up by the totals of 18 to 9, a score which plainly shows the poor character of the play. THE GEORGIA CHAMPIONSHIP.

A match game for the championship of Georgia and a gold mounted bat was played at the Georgia State Fair, Macon, Ga., on the 6th inst., between the Blue Stockings, of Savannah, and the Olympics, of Macon, and which resulted in favor of the Savannah Blue Stockings by the following score:—

WHITE STOKINGS VS. ACTIVES.—The white hosed men played a game on the afternoon of the 7th inst., at Ogden Park, with the Chicago Actives, who are the champion juniors of the state, defeating them by a score of 20 to 2, in nine innings, made as follows:—

The occasion, so says the Chicago Evening Journal, was rendered unusually interesting by the presentation to each member of the White Stocking eleven of a beautiful gold badge, the gift of President Gassette. The badge is a superb affair—probably the neatest and most expensive thing ever adopted as a club insignia. It is of solid, 18-karat gold, and the design was original with the donor. It consists of a handsomely engraved plate, with pin attached, the name of each recipient being engraved upon the face. From this extends a pretty blue ribbon, the clasp being ornamented with the letters "W. Attached to the lower end of the ribbon is the miniature diamond field, with the letters "C. B. The weight of the badge is eight penny-weight of pure gold, and the cost of each was about $26.

THE PROPOSED GRAND TOURNAMENT.—We regret to notice that the proposition of the Mutual Club to test their right to the whip pennant by the issue of a series of contests in a grand championship tournament, does not exactly meet the views of the clubs named by the Mutuals as their opponents in the tourney. The Chicago press objects almost in toto, and the Atlantics also object to two of the regulations. The general opinion seems to favor the rule of single games, as set forth in the CLIPPER last spring, when the tourney was first proposed. According to this rule—the only fair one for any base ball tourney—the five clubs would play as follows:—

Mutual vs. Red Stockings, Athletic, White Stockings and Atlantic 4
Red Stockings vs. Athletic, White Stockings and Atlantic..... 3
Athletic vs. White Stockings and Atlantics..... 2
White Stockings vs. Atlantic..... 1
Total..... 10

This is the same arrangement as we proposed last spring for the four clubs then named. We hope the above clubs will come to some arrangement, for all desire to see the championship question fairly settled this season.

THE JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP.—The attention of all junior clubs is directed to the following:—

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 5th, 1870.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—The Putnam Club, of Troy, hereby wins the silver ball and Junior Championship of the United States from the Tuxis and Bailey Club, of Brooklyn, we would most respectfully invite all junior Association clubs to compete with us for that title. As it is getting late in the season we would like to have clubs who intend to play us send in their challenge and name the day. Our season closes Nov. 1st. All communications will be promptly answered. Respectfully yours,

W. FRANCIS, Sec. Putnam B. B. C.

ATLANTIC VS. YALE.—The College players of old Yale will visit Brooklyn, Oct. 19th, to play the Atlantics on the Capitoline grounds, when a good game may be expected.

FOREST CITY, OF CLEVELAND vs. RED STOCKINGS.

THE REDS IN A TIGHT PLACE.

A game between the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, and the Red Stockings, was played on the Union Grounds, Cincinnati, on the 8th, which resulted in a scant victory for the Reds in the ninth innings by a run of good fortune, joined to their excellent staying qualities. This was the fourth game this season between these clubs, the Reds having won them all by scores of 12 to 2, 24 to 10, 27 to 22, and now 18 to 15. The Cincinnatis, on this occasion, played their full nine for the first time since George Wright was injured, the latter player going to the left field until the eighth innings, when he changed positions with Leonard. The Clevelanders batted well, but it was noticeable that all of their runs were made off Brainard, nothing being scored after Harry Wright commenced to pitch, in the seventh innings. The Clevelanders made four to their opponents' one in the first innings, the Reds fielding rather loosely, and at the end of the fifth innings the score stood 6 to 5 in favor of the visitors. As the interest of the game culminated in the last half, we give a detailed report of the last four innings:—

Sixth Innings.—Allison, of Cleveland, sent a high fly to left field, which G. Wright failed to get. Carleton made first on a bounder down at the plate which ran off foul, sending Allison to third. Pratt hove up a fly in right centre, which McVey captured handsomely. J. White took first base and then second on slow handling, Allison and Carleton scoring. A wild pitch let in J. White. Heubel was then filed by McVey. E. White got to third on a bounder which went over G. Wright's head. Sutton and Parker followed with safe hits, White scoring. The others were left, as McVey finished the innings by taking in Kimball's fly, having thus put all three out.....H. Wright was nicely taken on the foul fly by J. White. Leonard reached second on a sharp daisy cutter between Kimball's legs, which the latter missed. Brainard fell victim at first to Kimball's fielding. Sweasy sent home Leonard by a good hit to centre, taking first, and go around to 3d on a passed ball, another one letting him home. McVey on foul. Two runs, and the score 10 to 5 in favor of Cleveland.

Seventh Innings.—J. Allison hit wildly to centre for his base, as did also Carleton. Allison reached the home plate on Pratt's hit and Carleton on J. White's. The latter stole second. Leonard took Heubel's fly nicely. E. White cleared the bases and took second himself on a fine foul to left. The elegant batting of the Clevelanders now necessitated the changing of H. Wright to the pitcher's position, Brainard going to centre

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

A MIDSUMMER LYRIC.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"Speak to me," to the stars I said
One June night, as I walked alone;
But the stars kept silence overhead,
Nor helper to make my loving known.
"Unkind, cold stars," I cried, "the moon
Shall rise and tell my passion soon."

The moon above the purple hills
Then climbed the skies; I beat my knee,
But ah! my tears, like summer rills,
Were lost before they reached love's sea,
And I stood voiceless by a shore
Where wares are murmuring evermore.

Then, in despair, I called the winds,
And bade them seek some amorous shade,
To whisper there the spell that binds
My soul to her, the chosen maid;
But no! the idle winds went by,
And left love's sighs on each to die.

At last I met my peerless maid,
And love, unhelped by stars or moon,
Broke out in speech and stammering said
Its olden tale that night in June;
For I had climbed to Feeling's peak,
Whence love with pride must fall or speak.

I clasped the maiden, then my own,
Repeating o'er my love again,
And not this time spoke I alone—
Moon, stars and winds joined my refrain;
"I love—she loves"—the echoes heard,
And earth and heaven joined each fond word

THE VIELE DIVORCE SUITS.

GEN. EGBERT L. VIELE AND HIS WIFE SUE FOR A DIVORCE—COUNTER CHARGES OF ADULTERY.

On the 6th the return to the habeas corpus sued out by Mrs. Teresa Viele to recover possession of her children from Gen. Viele, who is a well-known civil engineer in this city, pending the trial and decision of the suit brought for divorce, was made before Judge Cardoza. The facts in the case as elicited are that Gen. Viele, last fall, brought a suit in the Supreme Court for a divorce on the ground of adultery. The case was not immediately brought to trial, and, according to the statements of counsel of Mrs. Viele, not believing that it would ever be tried, or that if tried it would be tried before a political referee and not before a jury, as she desired, instituted a suit for divorce in the Court of Common Pleas, on the ground of adultery and cruel and inhuman treatment. Gen. Viele then obtained an order staying proceedings in the suit brought by Mrs. Viele. The case rested in this way until the beginning of the past week, when a writ of habeas corpus was obtained on a petition, of which the following is an abstract:—

"That he has lived apart from the petitioner for upwards of two years, refusing to cohabit with or provide for her. That he took with him their infant children, Kathlyn, aged 16; Hermon, aged about 14; Teresa, aged about 11; Egbert, aged about 8, and Emily, who is about 5 years of age. That he has detained the children and has refused and refuses to allow her to have access to them. That her husband pretends, as she believes, that she is an unfit person to have control of the children and falsely charges her with being in adulterous relations with a Mr. or Gen. Wm. Averill. That he is either laboring under a hallucination or mania originating from insane jealousy of herself, or that his conduct is the result, as she believes, of collusion between him and one Julia Dana, who assumed to control the actions of the children, or some of them, and with whom the said Egbert L. Viele has been on criminally intimate relations. That the following is an abstract from one of several letters written by said Julia Dana to her husband, Gen. Egbert Viele:—"Oh, my own sweet darling, how blessed our lives would be if we could always have everything together, see everything together, and, most blessed of all, be permitted to enjoy a tranquil bed-time together." He did not say anything very bad. I was only anxious, my own love, that you should become completely free from her in every respect. I know you would be far happier, even irrespective of anything connected with me."

Now Viele, on his return to the city, says that as the children are in his custody as their father and natural guardian; that a suit by him against Mrs. Viele for divorce is now pending, in which he charges her with having committed adultery with Gen. W. W. Averill at various times between July, 1869, and March, 1870, in West Point and New York; that a motion for alimony and counsel fees, made by Mrs. Viele in June last, was withdrawn by her counsel; that she is a person of immoral character, a victim of secret and addicted to falsehood. He denies that she has been deprived of the privilege of seeing her children, but that she has caused much inconvenience by coming to his residence, carrying away furniture and irritating and annoying the children, who don't wish to have anything to do with her; that in March, 1869, she abandoned her husband and children and led an improper life; that his wife has now a separate estate of over $60,000, while he is dependent upon his profession as civil engineer.

Mrs. Viele, in reply, denies all these allegations, and asserts that her husband, in making them, is actuated by insane jealousy, and, acting under advice and counsel of one Julia Dana, that she found in his possession a number of letters, written by Julia Dana, in response to letters by him, showing most ardent attachment between them; that he is guilty of adultery with various persons; that he has treated her with great brutality, and by false statements prejudiced the minds and feelings of her children against her, and assaulted her when she tried to have access to them; that she has made every effort to bring her husband to a reasonable arrangement for a separation, she to have control of the two youngest children, and he of the others; that from the acts and declarations of her husband, she believes him to be insane from jealousy, or that his mind tends to insanity, his brother having been confined in an insane retreat. The case was continued by Judge Cardoza until the 8th inst., when the examination of witnesses as to the alleged charges was to have commenced.

BREACH OF PROMISE.

THE WIDOW OF A DECEASED JOURNALIST SUES HIS SUCCESSOR.

$20,000 WANTED TO PATCH UP THE WOUND.

A suit has been commenced, in the Superior Court, in this city, by Mrs. Anais l'Heritier, widow of the late editor of the Courrier des Etats Unis, against Leon Minnier, the present editor of that journal, the fair plaintiff laying her damages at $20,000, for a breach of promise of marriage. The court have granted an order of arrest and the defendant has been held in $5,000 bail. Mme. l'Heritier, in her affidavit, says:—That she has known M. Minnier for about seven years; that during the latter years of the life of her husband Minnier was associated with him in the conduct of the paper. At her husband's death bed Minnier promised him that he would watch over and protect herself and her children. She is thirty-four years of age and the defendant is about thirty-six. Prior to these wrongs of which below she makes a complaint she moved in good society and was respected by a large acquaintance. She has received the benefit of a finished education and hitherto had lived happily and respected. On or about the middle of the month of July, 1869, Minnier proposed to marry her, and at her house, 18 East 28th street. In this city, he asked her to become his wife, to which proposition she consented, and then and there they mutually agreed to become husband and wife. After that Minnier went to France on a visit to his mother. On his departure from this country for France he promised her that on his return he would bring her her bridal trousseau.

After his return from France to this city on or about the 16th of October, 1869, and in the presence of others, he repeated the promise of marriage on several occasions, and agreed that he would marry her in Jan. 1870. Then, under the pretence that he would acquire his full interest in the paper soon, and did not wish to marry until he had, he postponed the marriage until July, 1870, when he acquired his full interest, after which the plaintiff asked that his promise of marriage be fulfilled, and in the presence of her brother in law and others Minnier repeated his promise of marriage, and earnestly assured her that he would soon fulfil his promise. Finally, about the 26th day of September, 1870, the defendant refused to perform his promise, and said that he would never marry her, but that he was engaged to marry one Madame Roux, recently divorced from M. Roux, of this city. Mrs. L'Heritier further says that the defendant, since July, 1870, has told her that his income was about $18,000 a year. She has in her possession about fifty letters addressed to her by Minnier, in which he speaks in the warmest terms of attachment to her.

WHEN THE CAT'S AWAY THE MICE WILL PLAY.—A recent case of marital infidelity at Burlington, Vt., is thus detailed:—A certain young man of that city suspected the fidelity of his wife. Accordingly a few nights ago he announced that he was going to be absent for a few days. Instead of leaving the city, however, he availed himself of the services of a detective, and proceeded to his own house, whence he found his wife already absent. He then went to the boarding house of one Hansom, a wealthy and elegant rake, and on the sure principle of tampering with the affections of his wife, Hansom's room was brilliantly lighted. In the shadows near by was the officer of justice, and the outraged husband hovered till morning. At length the door opened, and who should make her appearance but the unfaithful wife, leaning fondly upon the arm of her lover. The detective at once stepped forth, arrested them both, and conveyed them to jail. The infuriated husband having first exacted, at the point of the pistol, a confession of her infidelity from the fallen woman. The latter, appalled at this sudden judgment, went into convulsions. Having been subsequently bailed out, she is now with her friends. The unfortunate, sinning woman is represented as comparatively young, beautiful, gentle, in not very good health, and as having hitherto sustained an unblemished character. It is reported that Mr. Hansom was to have been married in about two months.

A WHITE WOMAN SOLVES THE QUESTION OF NEGRO EQUALITY.—Considerable excitement was created at the Danville depot, Richmond, Va., a few days ago, by a colored woman's boarding the train as it was about to start southward, to look for her eloping husband. She found him aboard in company with a white woman, and vainly endeavored to persuade him to return to her home and affections. The black villain ordered her to leave at once, and declared that he wanted nothing more to do with her. She burst into tears and departed with a sad and sorrowful heart, avowing, however, that she could have borne her misfortunes and forced widowhood if a colored woman had caused them; but to be thus bereaved by poor white trash was more than she could stand. Some of the passengers expressed a determination of throwing the loving eloping couple overboard as they crossed the bridge over the river, but upon sober second thought it was concluded that both would enjoy the torments of hell as long as they lived on earth, and with this conclusion they left them to their delightful prospects.

A WIFE TREATED TO RED PEPPER AND FIXINGS.—The good people of Lancaster and Clinton, Worcester county, Mass., have recently had a first-class case of scandal. It appears that Luther H. Moody, of Clinton, became enamored of Miss Sarah F. Wiley, of Lancaster, who had boarded in his family, and an intimacy grew up which promised to end in an elopement of the parties. The wife of Mr. Moody, having intercepted letters between her husband and Miss Wiley, which revealed their plans, paid a visit to the latter at her house in Lancaster, last Tuesday, to endeavor to dissuade her from her purpose. She was met by Miss Wiley, her mother and brother and grievously assaulted, red pepper being rubbed in her eyes and other injuries inflicted. For those acts the three Wileys were before the police court at Clinton on Sept. 24th, when the above facts were developed, as reported by the Clinton Courant, and the defendants were each fined $10 and costs, which were paid.

OH FIE! SARAH, HOW COULD YOU DO SO.—The Portsmouth Times says that Mrs. Eliza Ann Evans, of Seabrook, N. H., and her husband Joseph, have been arrested and bound over in the sum of $5,000 to appear to answer to a charge of defamation of character, brought against them by Mrs. Sarah Rowe and her husband Jacob, also of Seabrook. According to the legal papers served upon the parties, Eliza Ann has told the neighbors that Sarah came into her (Eliza Ann's) house, and while there in broad daylight, did force her innocent and partially intoxicated husband to do certain naughty things. Sarah alleges that Eliza Ann has told that she saw these scandalous proceedings with her own eyes. Sarah is comparatively poor, while Eliza Ann is rich, and she demands that the courts make Eliza Ann pay her $5,000 for the damage done to her character. The innocent Joseph, who has not behaved precisely like the Joseph of Holy Writ, is about 40 years of age, while Mrs. Rowe has seen about 50 summers.

HOW WOMEN ARE BIRCHED, OR A RUSSIAN BALLROOM LUXURY.—It does not appear that the ladies of Russia are any better than their sisters in this country; and yet the rod is not spared on them. They are flogged enough to make them very superior beings, if there is any virtue in licking lassee. A book, with the inviting title of "The Rod in All Countries," says that anecdotes of flaggellation of ladies in Russia could be multiplied to any extent. The author says:—"It was stated a few years ago in a German newspaper that three of the most beautiful women in St. Petersburg were driven direct from one of the Imperial balls in their own carriages, in all their finery of satin and lace, to the police station, and, after being mounted on a man's shoulders, with their dresses tucked up, were smartly whipped with a birch rod. No explanation was given, but they were dismissed with the significant caution to hold their tongues in future. At another Imperial party, some young ladies, who had been chatting too freely, were politely escorted by a maitre d'hotel to a distant apartment, where, being made to kneel over an ottoman, they were severely smacked by a female housekeeper, with their satin slippers, and then sent home." If this is true, what a field Kossuth would be for some of our American female agitators to travel in.

HOW TO RAISE THE WIND!—The following unique contract was recently made between two well known residents in West Troy N. Y.:—

Know all men by these presents, that I, Hussey Woodward, of West Troy, the lawful husband of Bridget Woodward, my wife, residing with me at West Troy aforesaid, for value received and in consideration of $5 to me in hand paid by Otis Benjamin of the same place, have and hereby do sell, transfer and sell to said Benjamin, said Bridget, and release to him all my right, title and interest in and to said Bridget, as such wife to said Benjamin, to have and to hold her forever. Witness my hand this 31st Sept., 1870.

His
HUSSEY + WOODWARD.
Mark

WITNESS—H. J. Hartnett.

The only difficulty in the matter is, that Bridget refuses to ratify the contract. Barkis Benjamin is very willin', but Bridget holds back and threatens that, if he claims his rights under the contract, she will "split his head open with an axe!"

A LADY of Binghamton has applied for a divorce because of cruel treatment by her husband. She says that during the first year of her wedded life he called her "my dear," the second year she was denominated "Mrs. B.," and during the third year the endearing title degenerated into "old sorrel top," which is more than she is willing to bear.

TWELVE BRIDESMAIDS, twelve groomsmen and twelve ushers are to help marry a couple in New York next month, in a church where the decorations are to cost something like $6,000. After the parties have been married a short time it will only take one judge to divorce them, if necessary.

THE TRIGGER.

WHO IS THE CHAMPION PIGEON SHOT?

JOHN TAYLOR TO THE FRONT.

Recent occurrences in the pigeon shooting world have stirred up the veteran expert, John Taylor, well known throughout the land by his brilliant achievements with a shot gun, who has buckled on his armor, and with a view to establishing beyond question his right to the title of champion, issued the subjoined bold challenge, which don't bar anybody:—

NEW YORK, October 4, 1870.

FRANK QUEEN.—SIR:—Much has been said of late respecting the qualifications of certain pigeon shooters, as to who is the best shot, and who is considered the Champion Pigeon Shooter, one person claiming it, then again it is conceded to another. Now, Mr. Editor, I want this to be perfectly understood among all such claimants, that I still consider myself the Champion Pigeon Shooter of the United States, and shall hold the honorable title until some person can be found who can beat me at double and single shooting, when, and not till then, will I relinquish it. I have challenged all, and beaten every one who has contested with me, and think that I can yet defeat all comers. As a proof of my willingness, I now openly challenge any person in the United States to an honorable contest, under the following rules and regulations:—I will make two matches (if there is any gentleman to be found who dare accept) this challenge as follows:—One a single bird match, and one a double bird match, each match for $1,000 a side. The first to be at 100 single birds, from a ground trap, 21 yards rise, 80 yards fall, 1⅛ oz. shot; to find birds, trap and handle for each other, or find a substitute. The second match to be at 50 double birds, from a ground trap, 18 yards rise, 100 yards fall, 1¼ oz. shot, to find birds, trap and handle for each other, or find a substitute. The above matches to come off as soon as the preliminaries can be concluded. The object of my putting out this challenge is to stop the talk of certain would-be champion pigeon shooters, or give them an opportunity of testing their qualifications as shooters by accepting the above challenge. I also insist that the contest shall be a shot in the air, as I attained my present position, and am not willing to part with it until I am defeated in both double and single bird shooting, from ground traps. Mr. Editor, shooting out of it, and T. traps is all very well to decide sweepstake or club matches, but all sporting men claim that the championship should be decided by both single and double shooting, and that the finding of birds for each other is far better, as then both parties will be expected to procure the best and strongest birds, which is not the case when it and T. traps are used, as, generally speaking, the persons procuring the birds are not so particular as to their quality, they merely procuring the requisite number. Besides the above two matches for the championship, I am prepared to meet any gentleman in a match for from $250 to $1,000 a side, in a little fancy triplet shooting, viz.:—that of putting three birds in a ground trap, using two guns, 18 yds. rise, 100 yds. fall, 1⅛ or 1⅛ oz. shot, any 30 triplets; to find, handle and trap for each other, or find a substitute.

Any one accepting this challenge can leave a deposit of $250 at the CLIPPER office, which will be immediately covered.

JOHN TAYLOR, Champion pigeon shooter.

TOURNAMENT IN ILLINOIS.

A number of trigger pullers residing in the state of Illinois, engaged in a tournament held at Peoria on Sept. 29th, 30th and Oct. 1st., to witness which there was a large assemblage of sports. The prizes were a gun valued at $100, a gold watch worth $150, and a sweepstake purse of $100 in greenbacks. Chas. Reynolds was appointed scorer. Below are the names of the contestants and the score for the first day:—

H. Doxy	1011111	Geo. Harris	0111100
J. Duggins	10010	Robt. Jeffers	1110010
J. Griffith	1101100	H. Valentine	0011100
" Selaby	00	F. Kimble	1101110
T. Lindsay	0011111	Dan Stevison	00
Matt Ferry	1101110	J. Griffith, for Duggins	1111101
J. Griffith	1111111	T. Duggins	0111111

Duggins and Griffith tied, but the shooting of was deferred until the following day, when Griffith won. The purse of $100 was also won by Griffith, as will be observed by the score annexed:—

John Griffith	1111111	Eaton	1111101
George Horns	1111111	Matt Ferry	101110
Fred Kimble	1111111	Jeffers	0100110
Bercaw	1110111	Jo. Long	11
Doxy	1111011

A match for $100 was then shot for by Duggins and Harris, which was won by the latter. Another sweepstakes for $100 was also won by Griffith.

WARD CHALLENGES PAINE.

The newly fledged pigeon shooting champion, Ira Paine' is not destined to retain the laurels lately won from Miles Johnson without exercising his skill against other aspirants for the honors attached to the title. Besides John Taylor, the Canadian expert, James Ward is desirous of having another tilt with him, as the following challenge attests:—

TORONTO, Oct. 1st, 1870.

Having been informed by Mr. Hodder, of this city, that Ira A. Paine, of New York, is very anxious to shoot another match against me, now, if that is the case, and as Mr. Paine is the champion shot of the United States, and I claim to be champion of Canada, I will shoot a match against Mr. Paine in a manner I consider best calculated to test the merits of champions. Black birds are harder to shoot from the trap than pigeons, and double birds are harder to shoot than single; and I think that before a man can be a champion he ought to be a double bird shot as well as single. Double bird shooting is the only way to try professionals. I do not mean to say that Mr. Paine can't shoot double birds; but I am ready to make a match with him for $300 in gold a side, and will allow him $30 for expenses if I win the match. The shooting to be done in Toronto, and I will furnish all the birds. The conditions to be fifty single black birds each, at eighteen yards rise, and sixty yards boundary, from ground traps; and twenty-five double pigeons each, eighteen yards rise and one hundred yards boundary, plunge traps. Each man to trap and handle for the other. The charge to be 1⅛ oz. I will shoot according to any rules Mr. Paine chooses to name, and likewise let him name any member of the Forrester Club, of Buffalo, for referee. This challenge is left open for six months, and I will shoot at any time after two weeks' notice. By putting $50 forfeit with the editor of the Daily Telegraph, or with any responsible gentleman in Toronto, the match can be made.

JAMES WARD, Toronto, Canada.

Edward W. Tinker, of Providence, R. I., has also sent forth a blast of defiance to Paine, to shoot a match for $500 a side and the champion badge, according to the requirements of the rules governing matches for said trophy.

CHALLENGE FROM WARD TO ALL EUROPE.—The following appears in Bell's Life of Sept. 24th. The amount offered for expenses is not sufficient to form a great inducement to accept the def:—

I hereby challenge any man in Europe to shoot at 100 single birds, from H and T ground traps, 21 yards rise and 80 yards boundary, and at 50 double birds, from H and T plunge traps, 18 yards rise and 100 yards boundary, for $1,000 a side. The man making the best score at single and double rises to take the money. Match to come off at the city of Toronto, province of Ontario, and to be governed by the "Dominion of Canada Rules for Pigeon Shooting." To any gentleman accepting my challenges I will allow $100 towards defraying his expenses in coming to this country, and will furnish all the birds free of charge. Communications to be addressed to Richard Vareos, Esq., 183 Yonge street, Toronto, Ontario. I will also allow the gentleman accepting my challenge the privilege of choosing any responsible gentleman in Toronto as stakeholder. This challenge to remain open for six months, and match to be shot in six weeks from date of acceptance. JAMES WARD,

Champion Pigeon Shot of Canada.

Toronto, Sept. 7, 1870.

PIGEON SLAUGHTERING BY A COUPLE OF SUCKERS.—An interesting pigeon shooting match came off at the fair grounds, Quincy, Ill., on Sept. 24th, the participants being Captain A. H. Bogardus, the champion shot of the state, and W. B. Hanworth, a well known amateur sportsman of Quincy, for a purse of $400. Although the weather was disagreeable and the roads muddy, the attendance was much larger than was anticipated. The appended score will show that some excellent shots were made by both parties. It will be remembered that Mr. Hanworth carried away the first prize at the state tournament held at Chicago some time ago, where his ability as a marksman had ample chance to be tested. Thirty single birds and ten double birds were the number shot at. The score:—

PIGEON SHOOTING AT YONKERS, N. Y.—On the 29th ult., a match took place at Yonkers, N. Y., for $300, ten birds each, 21 yards rise, 80 yards boundary, 1¼ ounce shot, which resulted as follows:—

Frank Roach	1011101011—7	James Branson	0010011101—5
James O'Brien	1111010110—7	Henry Wicker	0100110011—5

The tie between Roach and O'Brien was shot off, at three birds each, O'Brien killing three, Roach getting 2. A second match, for a sweepstakes of $5 each, at five birds, upon the same conditions as above, was then shot, with the following result:—

O'Brien	01111—4	Jas. O'Brien	01100—2
Ward	11101—4	Pat O'Brien	01100—2
Wilcox	11010—3	Treaux	00000—0

Ward and Joe O'Brien then shot off their tie at four birds, each killing three and dividing the stakes.

ITALIAN RIFLE ASSOCIATION.—The fourth annual target excursion of the Columbo Guard is to be held at Suiser's East River Park, on Wednesday, Oct. 12th, in commemoration of the landing of Christopher Columbus. We acknowledge the reception of an invitation to join in the festivities.

HANDY FOR BARKEEPERS.—J. Haney & Co., of 119 Nassau street, this city, have issued a little book entitled "The Steward and Barkeeper's Manual," showing how to mix all kinds of beverages, with recipes for liquors, cordials, bitters, syrups, etc. With this work before him, every man can be his own barkeeper.

AQUATIC.

THE CAMBRIA AND MAGIC.

INDEFINITE POSTPONEMENT OF THE RACE.

The match sometime since arranged between the Cambria and the Magic, and perhaps generally regarded with greater interest than any in which the English vessel has figured since her arrival in our waters, has not yet been brought to an issue, nor is there at present any date fixed upon for its decision. A gale of wind and the failure to secure a steamer which would venture to act as stake-boat twenty miles to windward of Sandy Hook light-ship, at such a time, compelled a postponement of the contest on the 30th ult., as the lack of the ten knot breeze stipulated for had done on the day preceding. Both vessels had proceeded to the Horseshoe early in the morning, and the owner of each was anxious for a race, but the non-arrival of the steamer Josephine, which had been chartered to act as stake-boat, obliged an abandonment of the idea. A proposal was then made by Mr. Osgood that the vessels sail from Sandy Hook around the light-ship and back to the Club House at Staten Island, but Mr. Ashbury declined and made a counter proposition —to sail from the Hook to the light-ship, thrice around and back, considering that about equal in length to the match course, but this was declined by Mr. Osgood, who did not consider it possible that a contest upon such conditions could be decided within twenty-four hours, though in a letter subsequently published the owner of the Cambria declared that she would have accomplished the feat in from ten to twelve hours. Finding it impossible to come to any agreement the vessels weighed anchor and returned to the Club House, it being then understood that the race would take place on Monday, Oct. 3d. From the appended correspondence, however, it will be observed that the race has been postponed indefinitely:—

NEW YORK, Oct. 1st, 1870.

MY DEAR SIR.—I received Mr. Wilson's letter suggesting Monday as the race. I stated to you I was engaged every day till Friday, when I go to California. Yesterday was Cambria's day and the weather I wished when giving the challenge, and I much regret the race could not be made yesterday. A ten knot breeze is my minimum, and it is not my wish or intention to sail in less. It would, therefore, be useless to fix any particular day until stormy weather sets in, when the Cambria will always be found at Sandy Hook, ready to race. Faithfully yours, JAMES ASHBURY.

EVENING, Oct. 1st, 1870.

MY DEAR SIR.—On my return to the Island late this evening, I find your note of this date declining to sail on Monday. I will, therefore, countermand the order for the steamer Seth Low, engaged to act as stake-boat.

I regret as much as yourself that the race did not come off yesterday, owing to absence of the steamer.

It would, however, have been impossible to have made the race in the allotted time, as Captain Tannock stated it would take the Cambria ten hours to go twenty miles to windward in the gale then blowing. I cannot agree with you as to waiting at Sandy Hook for a day like Friday, when you style the Cambria's day, as it would be almost impossible to get a steamer to act as stake-boat on the morning of the race. Very truly yours, FRANKLIN OSGOOD.

To Commodore James Ashbury, yacht Cambria.

In another letter, intended for publication, the owner of the British yacht writes as follows:—

In England it was considered that the Cambria would stand no chance in turning to windward against American centre-board yachts, and having knowingly entered in every race in smooth inland waters at a disadvantage, I think it is now unreasonable to again hope and expect that at least two or three centre board vessels will enter against the Cambria in strong winds and broken waters, and thereby the better compare the two systems—English keels versus American centre-boards. When I had the pleasure of recently issuing my challenge, it was intended more particularly to apply to vessels on the American principle and of about the Cambria's size, by the New York Yacht Club rule. To me and yachtsmen generally it will be a matter of the utmost little Magic is to be the only centre-board vessel pitted against the Cambria out of such a splendid fleet as have, from time to time, sailed against the heavily sparred, ocean going Cambria in inland smooth waters. Those three formidable competitors—Magic, Sophia and Dauntless—I do not look upon as in all respects satisfactory, as no credit can accrue to the Cambria by beating so small a vessel as the Magic, and the races with the two keel boats involve no special principle at issue, but may simply demonstrate that size and power will tell.

From Monday morning, the 10th inst., the Cambria will remain at anchor off the Hook waiting for the required ten knot breeze for the above three races, and at the same time ready to sail every centre board yacht in America in a ten knot breeze, in the course to be from off the Hook round the Sandy Hook lightship and back three times—New York Yacht Club rule—providing the wind is such as to be a deed best, otherwise the start to be from the lightship windward and back twice. I leave this challenge open until 8 A. M. on Friday, the 7th inst., and, on receipt of any acceptances by telegraph or letter addressed to the Brevoort Hotel, I will arrange for the Cambria to remain for an indefinite period, and race, if required, every centre board yacht in America for a fifty guinea cup.

In Mr. Osgood's letter to me of the 1st, he states it would have been impossible to make the race in the allotted time, 5½ hours. To point out how we do attempt to sail in less time, there being no question as to there being a ten knot breeze; the 5½ hours suggested by Mr. Osgood was intended simply to make it a race, in case of dispute as to there being wind enough. The spirit of my challenge was not for an exact ten knot breeze, but a strong wind or more. Whatever force the wind might be over ten knots the race was to take place, and can still do so. Yours truly, JAMES ASHBURY.

A ten knot is a very stiff breeze to stipulate for, and that in a contest governed by the conditions upon which Mr. Ashbury issues a challenge, a vessel so much smaller than the Cambria, would be placed at a great disadvantage, is manifest to all. Mr. A. may urge that he is justified in so persisting, owing to the fact that in other races in which he has engaged the Magic has had the advantage of his vessel in regard to wind and water, but as it is the desire that the proposed race shall be a true test of the relative merits of the opposing yachts, such stipulations should be made as will place them as nearly as possible upon an equality. The general public are greatly disappointed because of the postponement of the race, and some are disposed to censure Mr. Ashbury for pursuing such a course. The following communication also refers to the match, explaining the cause of the non-appearance of the steamer engaged for the 30th ult.:—

SIR.—Mr. Franklin Osgood engaged the steamer Josephine from me with Mr. Ashbury and friends, to act as stake-boat under any state of the weather. On the morning of the race he went on board the Josephine and saw the captain, and urged upon him the necessity of being on the ground without fail, as he meant to sail in the light breeze which then was then blowing. Capt. Brailsted stated to Mr. Osgood that he would certainly do. The steamer left New York at 9 o'clock, A. M., and proceeded down the bay, until an accident happened to her steam-pipe, which rendered it necessary for her to put about. In my opinion no steamboat would have gone out 20 miles from the light-ship on that day.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4, 1870. J. H. VANDERBILT.

A banquet in honor of Mr. Ashbury was given by Commodore Stebbins at the Union Club on Tuesday evening, 4th inst., and on the same day Mr. A. performed the part of host at a similar entertainment given at the Brevoort House. On Friday, 7th, he took his departure for California, leaving the Cambria in charge of her captain, who will sail her in the races with the Sappho and Dauntless, which are to take place during the current week.

ANOTHER CHALLENGE TO THE CAMBRIA.

The owner of the yacht Fleetwing, a vessel made famous by her memorable race with the Henrietta and Vesta across the ocean, is desirous of pitting her against the Cambria, as will be observed by the following challenge, to which no answer has as yet been returned publicly:—

NEW YORK, Oct. 3, 1870.

COMMODORE JAMES ASHBURY.—DEAR SIR.—If agreeable to you I will sail the Fleetwing against the Cambria, according to the rules of the Brevoort House, on the 10th inst., from a point twenty miles to the southward, round a stake-boat anchored four miles from the shore, and back to the starting place. In case the weather should be stormy, so that a stake-boat cannot be procured, I propose to sail from the same point in a southerly direction until Squan Inlet bears west by compass and return, each vessel to have a judge on board. I make this last proposition to prevent any delay in starting on account of weather or absence of tug-boat. Very respectfully your obedient servant, GEORGE A. OSGOOD.

AMATEUR ROWING AT PATERSON, N. J.—The autumn regatta of the H. M. A. Boat Club, of Paterson, N. J., came off on the 7th inst., on Dundee Lake, on which beautiful sheet of water the handsome boat house of the club is located. These races were arranged more for the gratification of the members and their many friends than with the idea of exhibiting any remarkable or scientific oarsmanship. The whole affair was entirely successful and attracted a far greater number of spectators than was anticipated. The first race was between the old shell Stranger and the gig Passaic, each rowing four oars and the Passaic carrying a coxswain. Distance, one half mile and return. The crews were as follows:—The Stranger—Messrs. W. G. Oakman, B. W. Hoxsey, James Jackson and Monmer Prall; the gig, T. C. Oakman, J. H. Demarest, E. B. Atterbury, Jr., and Mortimer Clark; J. T. Atterbury, coxswain. The Stranger led until almost home, when she fouled a stake on the lake, and the Passaic, passing her, won the race in 9:30. The second race was a burlesque affair, denominated "single scull with coxswain." One boat was manned by E. J. M. Derrick, with Jas. Demarest as coxswain, the other by J. H. Hopper, with J. T. Atterbury coxswain. The latter won the race by a length, after a splendid struggle, distance, one half mile and return. The following competed:—Captain Wragge, rowed by T. C. Oakman and Mortimer Prall; Fanchon, by James Jackson and E. B. Atterbury, Jr., and the Mrs. Wragge, rowed by W. G. Oakman and Mortimer Clark. The Fanchon and Mrs. Wragge were upon the lead for a greater part of the course, when a foul happened them, and while they were fast together the Captain Wragge obtained sufficient advantage to handily pass the line. Several other sculling races ensued until dark, when a supper and dance, with excellent music, in the club's boat house, terminated in a pleasant manner the fall regatta of the H. M. A. Rowing Club.

MATCH BETWEEN PRINTERS AND BOOKBINDERS IN SIX OARED BOATS.—In order to settle a long disputed question among the employees in Houghton's Riverside printing and bookbinding establishment at Cambridge, Mass., as to which trade could turn out the best six-oared crew, a race was arranged, which was rowed on the Charles river on the evening of the 1st inst., the stakes being the championship of Riverside and supper for the crews, each trade to present two crews. The printers' crew in the first race was composed as follows:—T. A. Scott (stroke), John McKenzie, S. Chase, C. Connors, J. Hogan, and Pacey (bow). The opposition crew of bookbinders were J. S. Daily (stroke), Stephen D. Fowler, Richard Welch, J. H. Black, J. Beiuchi, Wm. Creman (bow). The distance was a mile and a half straight away. At the signal the printers got away first and gained a trifle on the start, which advantage they soon increased and maintained to the goal, winning the race by about four lengths in 10:16. The second race, over the same course, immediately followed. The printers' crew was constituted:—J. Green (stroke), J. Curley, P. Gallivan, D. R. Doyle, E. McDermott, H. Davis (bow), James McKenzie (coxswain). Bookbinders—Edward Edson (stroke), James Wilson, John Flannigan, Elijah Fry, W. P. Smith, J. P. Smithers (bow), Arthur E. Wilson (coxswain). In this race the bookbinders got away first, and, by a few lusty and determined strokes, gave the printers their wash. They kept the lead all through the race, winning by five lengths in 10:32½. This it will be seen that so far as deciding the championship was concerned, there was no result, one crew of each clan having won a victory. But the supper was enjoyed all the same, and it was understood that there should be another meeting of the rival crews shortly.

FEARON AND O'NEILL MATCHED.—Thomas Fearon, of Yonkers, and James O'Neill, of Troy, entered into an agreement on Monday, 3d inst., to row two match races for a prize valued at five hundred dollars in each race. The races are to be rowed in single scull shell boats, and each race is to be for a distance of three miles, with one turn. The first race is to be rowed on the Hudson river, at Lansingburgh, on the 5th of November, the second fifteen days later at Yonkers. O'Neill allows Fearon one hundred dollars for expenses to Lansingburgh, and Fearon allows a like sum for O'Neill's expenses at Yonkers. It is understood that the second race will not be rowed unless both parties desire a second test.

SINGLE SCULL RACE FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE UNION BOAT CLUB.—On Saturday, the 1st inst., there was a single scull race on the Charles river, Mass., between three of the members of the Union Boat Club, for the championship. The start was made from a stake-boat anchored near the club house, and the distance rowed two miles. The wind was blowing quite heavy, making the water very rough, so that the time was not very quick. The following being the entries and time made by each:—Wm. Appleton, Jr., 19:20¾; E. B. Robbins, 21:23¾; Cecil P. Wilson, 21:34.

DEFUNCT.—We have received a communication from a member of the Nassau Club, of this city, in which he states that the course rowed over in the recent shell race of the Schuylkill Navy was not the same as that pulled by the Nassau and Navy crews on the 23d ult. The latter, he says, was at least 500 ft. longer, having been lengthened from Turtle Rock to the Undine Boat House in deference to the wishes of the captain of the Nassaus, and, taking the average, this course was 38 seconds longer, which would make the time of the Quaker City crew 34 secs. slower than that made by the Nassau Club four.

THE KINGSTON, CANADA, REGATTA.

The annual regatta at Kingston, Canada West, was originally announced to take place on the 20th ult., but on that date the weather was the very opposite of what an enthusiastic yachtsman would ask for; it was a dead calm, and the result was that none of the boats could finish the race in the time fixed to sail over the course. It was then resolved among the yacht owners to sail the race on the next day, 20th, on which date the boats had all the wind they wanted, and more, too. For the first class prize the Ida and John Powers started, the latter leading in fine style; but on the stretch to Milton Island the Ida overhauled her, and they both rounded that point together. In the run back to the starting buoy the Ida passed the Powers and reached the buoy at 1:30 ahead of her. The wind had now increased to a gale, the Ida reefing down everything, while the Powers, that had started out ill provided with reefing material, was compelled to run before the wind towards the lake, abandoning the race. The Ida, however, kept on her course, and came in at 5.30 P. M., winning the first prize. A steamer was then sent to look out for the Powers, but could find no trace of her. It was supposed that she had run up the coast and rounded some point, where, protected from the wind, she could land her crew in safety.

The boats of the second class made a beautiful start. At Point Frederick the Mena led, with the Hard Tack second, Belle third. Rounding Milton Island the two first still led, but at Cedar Island, on the run back to the starting buoy, the Island Maid overhauled and passed the Hard Tack. The Mena rounded this buoy, 1.50; Island Maid second, 2.03; Hard Tack third, 2.06; A. Ramsay fourth, 2.07; Belle fifth, 2.08; Sleepy Canadian sixth, 2.09. The boats then made out for Snake Island light house and were exposed to the full strength of the gale. The Mena, Island Maid and Hard Tack, alone rounded Snake Light, keeping the same order as they had in starting out the second time. The Sleepy Canadian was forced to give up first, and ran rather lively, with fair wind, over to Simcoe Island, where her crew landed. The A. Ramsay turned back straight on the course, and the Belle, breaking her tiller, made for the shore, near Rockwood Asylum, where she was afterwards towed in safely, about the time that these yachts were turning, the Mena, still leading, with the Island Maid and Hard Tack coming down, after having rounded Snake island. About a mile below the Island the Maid completely capsized, and turned bottom up. The crew luckily all got a hold on the boat. The Mena passed on; the Belle and Ramsay, neither very close at hand, endeavored to go to their assistance, but the Hard Tack, in whose course they laid almost, most gallantly drew in and took the crew off. She lost twenty minutes by this creditable act, but carried in the two crews and won second place, being, except the Mena, the only boat which weathered the course. The Mena, of course, took the first prize. She is the new Cape Vincent boat, of which so much has been promised, and not without reason. A tug went out and towed in the Island Maid, after righting her.

At the start of the boats for the third class prize, the Idler led, followed by the Arrow, Crazy Jane and Qui Vive in order. On their arrival at the starting buoy, on the first round outside of Ceoar and Garden islands, the

THE TURF.

The Jerome Park Fall Races.

FIRST DAY—THURSDAY, OCT. 6TH.

CORSICAN WINS THE HANDICAP, KINGFISHER THE CHAMPION STAKES, HARRY BASSETT THE NURSERY STAKES, AND OYSTERMAN THE STEEPLE CHASE.

The fall meeting of the American Jockey Club commenced at Jerome Park on Thursday, the 6th inst. The weather was cold and cheerless for the season and the attendance was moderate. Yielding to the animadversions of the press on the exclusiveness of the Jockey Club in retaining the central and most eligible portion of the grand stand for their own accommodation and that of their families, the association have this fall thrown open the entire stand to the public, and no longer claim the exclusive right to what hitherto has been termed "The Members' Stand." The track was somewhat heavy after the recent rains, and was decidedly a slow one, possessing no elasticity whatever; hence the comparatively poor time made in the different races.

The race for the Handicap Sweepstakes, mile and a quarter, brought out five runners of the six accepting the weights. The absentee was Mr. Belmont's imported filly Nelly James, who had been specially prepared for this race, but had pulled up lame after taking her final gallop the morning before. The race was won by Corsican, beating Niagara, Felicity, Sanford, and his stable companion Mozart. Niagara and Felicity sadly disappointed their respective parties, who had fancied and backed them pretty strongly, both being beaten by the despised outsider, Sanford, who sold for a mere song in the pools, but who failed to beat Corsican. Major Bacon, his trainer and part owner, was greatly annoyed to find, after the race, that his partner, Mr. Holland, had neglected to back the horse for a dollar, as he had advised him, but, on the contrary, had bought in pools every other horse in the race, so that, instead of being a handsome winner, the Major was out of pocket by the race.

The Champion Stakes had six runners out of the forty-six entered, which made the net value of the stake $6,700 to the winner. This amount Kingfisher placed to the credit of his owner, Mr. A. Belmont, who thus got back nearly one-half of the amount ($15,000) which he paid Mr. Swigert for the son of Lexington and imported Eltham Lass. Two or three weeks ago it had been industriously put about that Kingfisher had been turned out and stopped in his training. Whether this was done to throw the other owners of horses engaged in the race off their guard we know not; but it assuredly had the effect of keeping the horse from being such a prominent favorite, as he otherwise would have been. It is true, Kingfisher had done an immense deal of work since his arrival at Jerome Park ten days before, and some credence may therefore be attached to his having been "let up" for a few days in his preparation at home, but the grand and inconceivably hollow style in which he won both heats of the race, after lying a long way from his horses, stamps him as a wonderful race horse. Mr. Belmont was highly gratified at his victory, for the only time he has started him since he bought him was at Long Branch, in the two mile heat race, when, after winning the first heat, he was compelled to go down before the greatest of Leamington's sons, Enquirer. He has still another engagement here, in the Annual Sweepstakes of $500 each, for three year olds, in which he will have to meet, among others, Capt. Moore's chestnut brother to Vauxhall, Foster, over the longest distance of two miles.

The Nursery Stake, for two year olds, brought out the largest field of horses that ever started in America, fifteen out of the sixty young ones entered coming to the post. The three best public performers were Harry Bassett, Mary Louise and Elsie, and the correctness of public running was shown in the circumstance of the two finishing in the order named in front of the dozen behind them. Mary Louise was the favorite against the field, for she had won her previous races in great style and last time, but she evidently could not act to advantage on the heavy ground, and Col. McDaniels' magnificent colt beat her easily at the finish. Mr. Ben Bruce bought the winner when a yearling, for Col. McDaniels, of Mr. Alexander, of Kentucky, for $315, and he has already won for his owners (Mr. T. Bassett, after whose son he is named, owning an interest in him) close on $7,000. He is a grand looking two year old, by Lexington, out of Canary Bird (a strain of breeding the Colonel has ever been partial to).

THE HANDICAP SWEEPSTAKES

of $50 each, p. p., with $500 added, one mile and a quarter, had five runners—Sanford, 5 yrs., 109 lbs; Niagara, 4 yrs., 103 lbs.; Corsican, 5 yrs., 111 lbs.; Felicity, 3 yrs., 86 lbs., and Mozart, 3 yrs., 88 lbs. The pool betting was as follows:—Bacon & Holland's entry (Corsican and Mozart), $1,010; Felicity, $650, and Sanford, $115. The start was from the three quarter pole at the head of the stretch, and when the flag fell for a capital start Corsican and Niagara were the first to show in front, with Sanford next and Mozart some distance in the rear. As the horses passed the judges' stand Corsican was leading a length, under a strong pull, with Sanford and Niagara second and third and Felicity fourth, several lengths before Mozart. They ran without change of position around the club house bluff, as they came in view again Corsican was seen two lengths in the lead, with Sanford next, as far before Niagara. The race was now virtually over, for Corsican, under a steady pull, galloped home the easiest of winners, three lengths before Sanford, and Niagara third. Time, 2:15¼.

JEROME PARK.—FIRST DAY, Thursday, Oct. 6th.—First race, Handicap Sweepstakes, of $60 each, play or pay, and only $10 if declared, with $500 added, the second horse to receive twenty-five per cent of the stakes; one mile and a quarter.

THE CHAMPION STAKES,

for three year olds, of $200 each, h f, with $1,500 added, the second horse to receive $300 out of the stakes, mile heats, had forty-six entries and six runners. These were Mr. Belmont's b c Kingfisher, J. O'Donnell's b c Harlc, Carroll and Cour's br c by Doneralle, dam Canary Bird; J. McConnell's br c Chilicothe, T. W. Deswell's b f Midday, and M. H. Sanford's b f Item. The pools sold as follows:—Kingfisher, $1,000; Haric, $300; Midday, $310; Chilicothe, $270; field, $70.

First Heat.—Chilicothe took the lead, with Midday and Doneralle next, and Kingfisher in the rear. Chilicothe opened a gap of two lengths around the turn, Doneralle and Item the next two, and in this order they ran around the Club House bluff. Coming into sight again, Midday had taken Item's place as third horse, while Kingfisher had so far improved that his backers' hopes for the heat died within them. On the lower stretch Chilicothe, Doneralle and Midday were all in a cluster, the former having a shade the best position. When fairly into the home-stretch Burns gave Kingfisher his head, for the horse had been pulling double, and like an arrow from the bow he shot from the rear to the front, and galloped home the easiest of winners amid the warmest acclamations at the brilliant performance, Chilicothe second, Midday third, and Haric, who laid up for the heat, last. Time, 1:49.

Second Heat.—Pools were now sold without Kingfisher. Midday brought $400, Haric $200, Chilicothe $115, and the field $40. The Doneralle colt took the lead, with Haric and Kingfisher next, but the two latter were pulled back into the rear. Doneralle led to the Club House bluff, rounding which Midday joined issue with him, and was leading as the horses disappeared from sight, Item and Haric third and fourth, and Kingfisher last. The latter bided his time until fairly into the straight, when he shot out, passed his horses as if they were standing, and won the heat and race with consummate ease in 1:49, Haric beating Midday for second money, Chilicothe fourth, Doneralle fifth, and Item distanced.

SECOND RACE.—Champion Stakes, for three year olds, of $200 each, half forfeit, with $1,500 added; the second horse to receive $300 out of the stakes; closed July 15th, 1868, with forty-nine entries; mile heats.

THE NURSERY STAKES,

for two-year olds, $50 each, p. p., with $1,000 added, one mile, was the next event. There were 60 entries, of which 15 came to the post, being the largest field of horses that ever started in America. The runners were J. O'Donnell's g f Mary Louise, D. McDaniels' ch c Harry Bassett, H. B. Todd's b c by Harry Booth, L. Jerome's ch f and b c (both by Kentucky), B. W. Hoxsey's gr f by Engineer, A. Belmont's b f Girl of my Heart, D. D. Withers' b f Elsie, R. E. Lewis' ch f Leone, M. A. Littell's gr f Mary Clark, Hunter & Travers' b c by Censor or Jerome Edgar, dam Nannie Lewis, B. G. Thomas' b f Auriola, and W. R. Babcock's ch f by Jack Malone. Pools sold as under:—Mary Louise, $1,000; Harry Bassett, $560; Elsie, $300; Auriola, $160; Babcock, $110; field, $370. Before the start, Harry Bassett advanced in favor, but even money on Mary Louise against the field was still current. Harry Bassett and Jerome's bay filly got away first, with the favorite next, but before rounding the turn Bassett took up the running, held the lead throughout, and although the favorite made several desperate efforts under the whip to reach him, she failed to do so, and Harry Bassett won easily by four lengths, Mary Louise second, and Elsie third. Time, 1:49¾.

THIRD RACE.—Nursery Stakes, for two year olds, of $50 each, play or pay, with $1,000 added; the second horse to receive $300 out of the stakes; closed 15th of July, 1869, with sixty entries; one mile. Col. McDaniels' ch c Harry Bassett, by Lexington, dam Canary Bird

D. D. Withers' br f Elsie, by Lexington, dam Babia	3

Twelve others ran but were not placed.

Time, 1:49¾.

THE STEEPLE CHASE,

for a purse of $800, had three entries—Oysterman, Tisdale and Biddy Malone. The betting was $300 to $200 on Oysterman against the field. The race was very uninteresting, for Biddy Malone fell and threw her rider at the second jump, and Tisdale did the same at the fifth, leaving Oysterman to go over the course at his leisure. Hugh Gaffney caught and mounted Biddy, went over the course and took second money, Tisdale's rider doing the same and saving his entrance.

FOURTH RACE.—Steeple Chase Handicap, sweepstakes of $25 each, play or pay, with $800 added, of which $300 to second; the third horse to save his stake; about two miles and a half.

A Protest Against Judges.

A sweepstakes trot between three horses, owned in Westchester county, took place at Fleetwood Park on the 5th inst. It was for a purse of $300, mile heats, three in five, in harness, and the competitors were J. Murphy's s m Lilly, of Fordham; G. Carpenter's b g Capt. Boyd, of White Plains, and W. McMahon's b c Blacksmith, of Portchester. Five heats were trotted, Lilly winning the purse. Blacksmith won the first heat, Capt. Boyd the second and Lilly the third, fourth and fifth and the race. Blacksmith came in first on the fourth heat, but the judges gave Lilly the heat on account of the former running considerably. The judges were violently abused by Capt. Burtran, the owner of Blacksmith, and the proprietor ruled him and his horse off the track. The time of the heats was 2:44; 2:45; 2:45; no time taken, and 2:48. The following protest has been handed to us for publication in this paper:

JUSTICE VAN HOESEN.—We, the undersigned, hereby certify that we were present at the trot at Fleetwood Park yesterday between the Blacksmith colt, Capt. Boyd, and Lillie; that we have read the accounts published in the newspapers and consider them unfair and prejudiced in every particular; that the taking of the second and fourth heats from the colt was an exhibition of unfairness which is without a parallel in the records of trotting; and that the presence of Mr. Daler in the stand and his constant interference with the judges, and his allowing Mr. Duffy, the reputed owner of Lillie, to remain in the judges' stand during the race, deserved the severest censure. The pool books also show that one or more of the judges had bets on the race.

THE FALL MEETING of the Springfield Club will be held at Springfield, Mass., on Oct. 11th, 12th and 13th, when, in addition to their other premiums, a purse of $2,000 will be offered for horses that have never beaten 2:27.

The Annual Horse Fair at Narragansett, R. I.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, OCT. 4TH.

The annual meeting of the organization that controls sport over the Narragansett track is always looked for with interest by those interested in trotting matters and the development of the abilities of the American trotting horse. Many of the recent reforms of errors and tricks common on some trotting tracks were first introduced at Narragansett, and those who attend their meetings now feel that they will get the worth of their money, and that as far as the managers are concerned the best horse will win every time. On the first day, Tuesday, Oct. 4th, the track was somewhat heavy, as all the day previous a heavy northeast storm had raged; but in the morning the clouds broke away, and the bright sunshine and bracing winds soon dried up the track. The first race was for a purse of $500, open to all horses that had never beaten 3 min., mile heats, three in five, and which had closed with fourteen entries, six of which were withdrawn, leaving the b m Lady Hughes, ch m Gypsy, b h Kansas Pet, b m Another Such, r h Andy Johnson, ch m Nellie, b g Doubtful and the blk g Contraband in the race. In the pools Lady Hughes was the favorite, with the Contraband for second choice. Prior to the start the owner of Lady Hughes entered a protest against the Contraband starting in the race, on the grounds that he had been 3 min. before he was entered in this race. When called upon for proof he introduced Mr. J. D. Chase, the manager of Piscatiquies Park, Foxcraft, Me., who swore that on the 4th of July, 1866, Contraband trotted and won a race in three straight heats in 2:36, 2:37 and 2:38. This settled the matter, and Contraband was ruled out. The race was gallantly contested, and was won by Lady Hughes in three straight heats, beating Kansas Pet a length in the first and second heats and Gypsy about two lengths in the third heat, the Pet taking third place. The following is the summary:—

NARRAGANSETT PARK, Providence, R. I., Oct. 4th.—Purse $500, for horses that had never trotted better than three minutes; $325 to the first horse, $125 to the second and $50 to the third; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

The second race was for a purse of $2,000, for horses that had never done better than 2:27, for which there were entered F. J. Nodine's, Brooklyn, s m Belle Strickland; Geo. M. Robinson's, Augusta, sp g Col. Lakeman, Daniel Mace's, New York, b g Harry Harley; O. A. Hickok's, New York, br m Western Girl; W. S. Briggs', Taunton, b g Twang; L. B. Brown's, Providence, s g Locust; M. Roden's, New York, blk s Charles E. Loew, formerly Patchen Chief; Budd Doble's, Philadelphia, blk m Jessie Wales; F. W. Burnham's, Hartford, s m Nonesuch, formerly Lady of the Lake; White and Doolittle's Waterbury, b g Ed. White, formerly Lou, Gen. Scott and Jim Smith. Twang was withdrawn, leaving nine starters, with the blk s Charles E. Loew, the favorite among the betting gentry. At the fourth attempt they got the word for the first heat, and Belle Strickland went to the front at once, leading all the other horses six lengths at the quarter, four lengths at the half, her spendid style of going winning loud applause. Entering the home-stretch Nonesuch made play for the Belle, and rapidly closed the distance between them, but the latter was trotting very steadily, and as the horses came up they presented a magnificent sight, passing under the string in the following order:—Belle Strickland one length in advance, Nonesuch second, half a length ahead of Charles E. Loew, Jessie Wales fourth, Locust fifth, Ed. White sixth, Harry Harley seventh, Western Girl eighth and Col. Lakeman ninth. Time of heat, 2:26. The second heat was splendidly contested, the Belle going to the quarter in 35 seconds, with Charles E. Loew second, Jessie Wales third. The half was passed in the same order, with Western Girl occupying the fourth place, the race between her and Harley having been quite exciting. On the lower turn Loew made a determined effort to overtake the belle, but it was useless; he left his feet, and was contented to take second place. Time, 2:26. The third heat was a repetition of the second as far as the Belle was concerned, Harley occupying second place at the quarter and half mile posts, and as they swung into the home-stretch he making a determined effort to close up on the mare, she passing under the wire a length in advance of Harley, with Loew third, Western Girl fourth, Wales fifth, Nonesuch sixth, White seventh, Locust eighth and Lakeman distanced. Time, 2:27. Summary:—

SECOND DAY.—Purse $2,000, for horses that never trotted better than 2:27; $1,300 to the first horse, $500 to the second, and $300 to the third; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5TH.

Bad weather materially interfered with the enjoyment of those in attendance this day, for just as the bell rang for the horses to come up it began to rain, continuing with more or less intensity all the afternoon, flooding the track, deluging the carriages in the field, and compelling the postponement of the race for trotting stallions until Saturday, the 8th inst., leaving only one event for the day, the 2:37 race, for a purse of $1,000, which had closed with seventeen entries, and which promised to bring out an unusually large field, as early in the morning, when it was fine, only six of the entries had withdrawn, but the rain caused four others to go out, leaving only seven contestants, viz., the b s Young Webster, ch m Josephine, br g Johnny Reb, br m Fanny Lambert, b m Kansas Queen, b m Enigma, and the br s Logan. Enigma was the favorite in the pools before the start, but, after the third heat had been won by the stallion Logan, many of the so-called knowing ones bought the stallion over the mare, for which they suffered considerably, as Enigma took the fourth heat and the race in fine style, all four heats being closely and hotly contested, Enigma only getting the first and second heats by a short length, with all the rest well up. At the half mile post, in the third heat, Enigma and Logan were head and head, both trotting finely and fighting for every inch of ground, first one leading by a neck, then the other. Just before passing under the string the mare made a skip, and the stallion got the heat by a neck. Again in the fourth heat did they have it hot and heavy, Johnny Reb, however, leading both of them at the three-quarter pole on a keen run, a position retained by him until the finish, the main interest being between Enigma and Logan, who trotted beautifully all the way up the home-stretch, the mare finally leading and passing under the wire by a neck. Johnny Reb was placed third for running, which gave Enigma first place, Logan second, Fanny Lambert Fourth, Josephine fifth, and Kansas Queen sixth, Young Webster having been drawn at the end of the third heat. Summary:—

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, OCT. 7TH.

In consequence of the continuance of the storm which commenced on Wednesday, it was found impracticable to have the trots fixed for Thursday, the 6th inst., trotted on that day; they were, therefore, postponed until Friday, 7th, when, notwithstanding that the weather was cold and unpleasant, the attendance was large, and the racing of an exciting character, three events being decided. The first was for a purse of $500, for horses that had never trotted better than 2:50, and for which there were nine entries, five of which started, viz.:—Mr. Douglas' blk g Brown Keeney, Bradley's b g Happy Jack, Woodruff's ch m Gypsy, Moody's b m Nellie Morrison, and Carpenter's b m Another Such. This was a finely contested race, especially between Brown Keeney and Gypsy, they trotting six heats for first money, Happy Jack having been ruled out after trotting five, he coming in third in all of them. Nellie Morrison, who took the first heat after a stubborn contest with Gypsy, was distanced in the second heat, Another Such being distanced in the first. Summary:—

The second trot was for a purse of $2,000, for horses that had never trotted better than 2:30, and for which there were twelve promising horses entered, comprising A. Howard's b g Coolo, George M. Robinson's sp g Colonel Lakeman, M. Carroli's b g N. B. Palmer, W. H. Woodruff's br s Mambrino Prince, Budd Doble's b m Lizzie Keller, William Doble's b g Colonel Russell, Benjamin Daniel's b m Topsy, J. M. Miller's b m Mary, J. Hornbeck's br g Captain Gill, G. N. Ferguson's b g Kansas Chief, J. J. Bowen's g g Royal John and John L. Doty's b m Lady Augusta. Of these Mambrino Prince, Lizzie Keller, Mary, Captain Gill, Kansas Chief, Colonel Lakeman and Colonel Russell were withdrawn, the latter two after appearing on the track by permission of the judges, they being very lame. Topsy won the pole, and, after scoring some ten or a dozen times, a fair start was effected, with Lady Augusta leading, a position retained by her to the quarter, which she did in 37 secs. Soon after passing she made a bad break, and Royal John went to the front, closely followed by N. B. Palmer. At the half John was leading two lengths. At the three-quarter pole N. B. Palmer went to work beautifully, and soon put himself at John's wheel, a fine contest ensuing all the way up the home-stretch. On reaching the distance stand Palmer left his feet, and John got the heat by a length, Lady Agusta third, Coolo fourth, and Topsy fifth. The second heat was a fine send-off, Royal John and Palmer leading to the quarter, where the latter made a bad break and Coolo passed him; in going to the half all broke except Coolo, who was trotting in splendid style, and had a lead of about four lengths. After passing the half Royal John, who was again trotting very finely, began to gain on Coolo, but he had gained such a lead that it was impossible to catch him, he getting the heat easily by three lengths, Palmer second, six lengths ahead of Royal John, who was four lengths ahead of Lady Augusta, Topsy being distanced. The third heat was the best trotted of the race, Palmer getting away with a lead and going to the quarter in 38½secs. and leading by about four lengths. In going to the half, Coolo, by splendid trotting, passed Royal John and made play for the lead with Palmer. The contest between them was very exciting. On entering the home-stretch Coolo led by a neck, but Palmer soon caught him, and neck and neck they came up the stretch, Palmer's driver, by superior generalship, sending him under the string a winner by a neck, with Royal John third and Lady Augusta fourth. Coolo was, however, put third for running on the back-stretch. The fourth and fifth heats were both taken by Palmer, after several close struggles with Lady Augusta, who, in both heats, broke at the distance stand, or otherwise the result of the race would probably have been different. Coolo, tiring out in the last heat, was distanced. Summary:—

Trotting at the Middlesex Agricultural Fair.

The seventy-sixth annual exhibition of this society, the oldest in the United States, was inaugurated on their grounds, at Concord, Mass., on the 4th inst. The trotting was commenced at 1 P. M., with a contest for a purse of $100, of which the first horse received $60, the second $25, and the third $15, the horses to go to road wagon; owners to drive. This brought out eleven contestants, and Bismarck, owned by E. O. Soles, of Woburn, won the first money; Milmore, by S. A. Holt, the second, and Morgan Prince, by B. F. Shattuck, of Peppereil, the third. Time, 3:03½; 3:03. Next was a trot for a purse of $300, for horses that had never beaten 2:45, the first to get $120, the second $60, and the third $20, which was won by S. Hays', of Medford, b m Lady Moscow, in three straight heats; H. P. Kendricks', of Brighton, br s Unknown, taking second money, and R. L. Flanders's, of Boston, b s Lexington, third; F. Houghton's b m Fanchon, and J. W. Cotton's s g Forest Boy, being, respectively, fourth and fifth. Time, 2:47; 2:48 and 2:50. The third and last race of the day was for a purse of $25, which was trotted for by Weston's Commodore Nutt, of Fitchburg, and Kendrick's No Name, the former winning with ease in 2:38 and 2:45. On Wednesday, the second and closing day of the fair, the attendance was large and the racing unusually fine, the first trot being for a purse of $175, for horses owned in Middlesex county that had never beaten 2:50, mile heats, best 2 in 3, and which drew out the following starters:—E. O. Sole's b g Bismarck, R. L. Flander's b g Bay Diamond, C. Moulton's b s Dictator, E. Rafferty's b g Kentucky, Rufus Baker's b s Bismarck, H. P. Kendrick's b g Unknown, J. and A. W. Moulton's b s John Lambert, S. A. Holt's b m Jennie Millmore, and B. F. Shattuck's g g Morgan Prince. After a close and interesting race Bismarck took the first money, $100, having won the second and third heats in 2:46 and 2:44; the first heat was taken by Kentucky Boy in 2:41, and who was second and third respectively in the next two heats, he getting the second purse of $50, Bay Diamond taking the third money, $25, having been third in the first and second heats and second in the third; after which there was a contest for double teams owned in the county, barring any horse that had ever beaten 2:50, mile heats, 2 in 3. Two teams trotted, namely, Michigan Boy and Snow Flake, entered by D. L. Dodge, of Lowell, and Halter and Colonel, by M. N. Cook, of Winchester. The first named were easy winners in 3:15 and 3:17. At 3 P. M. the principal race of the fair was called, which was for a purse of $250, for all horses that had never beaten 2:30, and for which there were five entries, and five heats were trotted before a decision was reached, Columbus Navigator winning the first two very handsomely, after which he tired, and the mare Jennie took the next three with ease. Summary:—

The Fall Meeting at Mystic Park.

LAST DAY—TUESDAY, OCT. 4TH.

The fall meeting on this track was brought to a conclusion on the 4th inst., after a three days' postponement, necessitated by the heavy rain storm that commenced on the morning of the 30th ult. The final trot was for a purse of $2,500, open to all horses except Lady Thorn, Goldsmith Maid and George Palmer, which brought out four entries, and who drew the following positions, viz.: W. H. Doble's b m Lucy, inside; Budd Doble's b g Hotspur, second; Ben Daniel's b m American Girl, third, and James McMann's b g Mountain Boy, outside. Among the betting fraternity and pool buyers American Girl was the favorite at $100 to $50. The track was somewhat heavy, which, it is thought, effected the time fully two seconds. After several false starts they all got away well together for the First Heat.—American Girl took the lead at once, well pushed by Lucy, with Hotspur about four lengths behind, with the Boy slightly in advance of him, and they retained these positions until the three quarter pole was reached, when the Girl let out a peg, and led by about two lengths, which she kept to the finish. Time, 2:23¾. Lucy second, the Boy third, the contest between him and Hotspur for that position being a very fine one, the Boy taking it by a head.

Second Heat.—A poor start—Hotspur away behind—Lucy had the lead, and the struggle between her and the Girl to the half mile pole was very fine; soon after passing it, Lucy let up a peg, and the Girl took the lead, retaining it into the home-stretch, when Lucy again went for her, and an exciting race took place between both the mares. Daniels at once put on the lash, and the Girl broke just before passing under the wire, giving the heat to Lucy. Time, 2:24½. Hotspur and the Boy trailed in about three lengths behind.

Third Heat.—The send off was a very even one, Lucy taking a slight lead at the turn, with the Boy well up and making excellent time. Just before reaching the half, Lucy cast one of her shoes, but continued nothing very fast, and the three quarters the Girl put on steam and passed both the Boy and Lucy, the latter giving the Girl a gallant fight for it in spite of her misfortune, she only losing the heat by half a neck. Time, 2:24½. Hotspur, after several bad breaks, passed the Boy and took third place.

Fourth Heat.—Another poor send off; both the Girl and Boy away ahead when the word was given, with Lucy dancing, but she did not lose much, for at the half she had taken the lead. Soon after passing it Hotspur and the Girl closed up on her, with the Boy a little in the rear, and a close and exciting race ensued all the way home, Lucy and the Girl passing under the wire so close that it was difficult to decide which was the winner, the judges finally giving it to Lucy. Time, 2:26, Hotspur third and Mountain Boy fourth.

Fifth Heat.—It was now so dark that patrol judges had to be sent out, the heat being trotted by moonlight. The Girl led at the start and won by a length, with Hotspur second, Lucy third and the Boy fourth. Summary:—

MYSTIC PARK, Oct. 4.—Purse, $2,500, for all horses except Lady Thorn, Goldsmith Maid and George Palmer; $1,800 to the first horse, $700 to the second and $300 to the third; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Oct. 10, 1870.

This is about the time when the "melancholy days, the saddest of the year," should make their annual appearance; but the days and nights we have had of late have been anything else but melancholy, the sun shining with unwonted brilliancy in the former, and the lunar orb taking up the subject as the sun sinks to rest out in San Francisco somewhere, and making our evenings like a schoolboy's morning face, so beautifully alluded to by Mr. Shakespeare in his "Seven Ages." The showman is rather "addicted" to melancholy days, for to him they are the gladdest of the year; then it is that the theatres and halls of minstrelsy are open, and trade flourishes; and ye fakers who erstwhile invaded the seams of their spotless coats and wore your wardrobe hats, now appear clad in immaculate habits and irreproachable tiles, and the free lunch is no longer their only base of supplies.....And speaking of the "provisional" government and base of supplies, "Our Jim" facetiously describes his attacks on his boarding house mutton as "storming the ram-parts."

.....Did you ever have the misfortune to get alongside of a professional grumbler, in a theatre? No? Well, take our advice, and at the first symptoms of a breaking out from such a source, leave as quickly as your legs will let you. We got caught in such a trap a few nights since—the grumbler was at it from the rising of the curtain until the going down of the same; he found fault with everything. Turning to us he said:—"See that stick—got dragoon boots on, with a dressing gown; nice way that, to dress a part." And again, when the carpet was being put down for a change of scene:—"Now why couldn't they have put down that carpet this afternoon, and saved all this bother; some people don't know their own business." We tacitly admitted that the carpet should have been put down in the afternoon. "That chap isn't fit to play that part—why, he don't know how to talk yet, let alone play." We submitted that the chap was a little deficient. "See that scene there! It ought'nt to be there at all—it should be a wood; bad stage management." To avoid an outbreak, and disturbance of the peace we concurred in the charge of mismanagement. "I don't like this play at all; its a wonder they don't get up something good once in a while, for people have to pay enough to get inside of a theatre; see that woman with long ringlets—how's that look? It's a d—n sight better to let ringlets alone, I think; and besides that, see that chambermaid—she's actually got diamond rings on her fingers—now what would a chambermaid get such things unless she steals 'em or they're given to her, and who the h—l is going to give away diamond rings for nothing? I just tell you that such chambermaids aint to be trusted." Again our silence gave consent to his strange proposition, and throughout the entire play were we thus disturbed by the growling and grumbling of this ill-natured man, for we were wedged in, and flight was impossible at this "stage of the performance." We thought of crying out "police," but that would only have made the matter worse, so we quietly submitted.....It is not true that there has been a falling out between "Man and Wife" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. The rumor had its origin in the difficulty between another man and wife, videlicit, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gayler, reported in the Observer a few minutes, and which culminated in the "falling out" of the man from a fourth story window, which it is now charged she showed him out.....One of our actor friends was fortunate enough last Saturday night to win a poor widow's watch at a raffle, but on his way home, after treating the crowd and seeing the widow, his prize was gone; his friends now call him the "Widow's Victim." A few lines in commemoration:—

LOST TIME.

Surely that actor must have been a very careless flat;
We only wish that we could win a watch as good as that—
You may bet your bottom dollar that, after we had won it,
A better watch than that, we know, we'd surely keep upon it.

.....Not many miles from brother Corbett's church is a sporting drum, where chamois leather and hard stuff is in vogue. Our Jim" presumptuously showed his face in there (the "drum," not the meeting house) a few days ago, to get his morning glory; with his usual inquisitiveness, James, observing a bronze statuette of a fine looking fellow, with ringlets, on horseback, inquired of the drawer of malt and hewer of chops, who the gentleman was. "Why, don't yer know him" quoth the bottle-holder. "His face is lively enuf," said the boy, taking up the statuette, "but I don't know where to put him." "Well," responded the compounder of stuff, "you can just put him down, I guess; that there's Charley Magney, the London comic singer." "Oh, ho," says Jim, "so it is—I thought I knew him; let me have him and I'll get the boss to put him in the CLIPPER." On inquiry, we learned that the statuette was one of Charlemagne, King of France. Such a fame indeed. We told a lady friend, this morning, that we must actually make a spring for our office to begin our summary, and what do you think she said:—"Au-tumn, now."..... A sad accident lately happened in a western town, one of those rapidly growing communities of which we hear so much. There was no place of amusement there, and the want of one being felt—as no town is now complete without its amusement hall—a project was set on foot to start one. The proposition met with favor, and the enterprise was being carried forward with great promise of success, but at the last gathering of the projectors, the floor of the meeting room fell through, and the project fell through at the same time. Do not let our friends be discouraged, but try again.....Figures, they say, don't lie. The manager of the Grand Opera House says upwards of thirty thousand persons have visited that place during fourteen representations of "Little Faust;" while the management of the Globe Theatre says twenty thousand have gone through the Globe in one week. Although a new place, the managers of the latter give evidence of being old stagers and lightning calculators. We say nothing.....You remember the "Man in the Flies," don't you? Well, he got out of the flies some months ago—fell headlong on the stage below, and has not been quite right since then; but still, he has managed to dish up for us a few ideas, which, we have reason to believe, though strangely written, are to the point. MORE NOTES ONTO THE DRAMMY.

BY THE MAN IN THE FLIES.

MISTER FRANK QUEEN, ESQ., SIR.—The field o' dramaticlik composition has bin cut up into so many different branches that it is gittin to be the hardest kind o' wurk for the critticx to travel over it. One feller what thinks it's 'is manifes destiny to figger as a second Shakespier sinks a shaft and injoures the ground for fix breshures, another runs a trench right across it, a third digs a ditch and swamps the hole field in muck, a forth digs it up as ef it was a tater patch, a fift converts it into a slorter house, and only now and then one comes along to sown it up with seed that may be mowen in semblin in the end. Has for the others oo draws their materil from the sturums and the bagnose, they're beginnin to sprawl over the stage in all directions like a tribe o' straddlelegs over a clean white table cloth—just as I mentioned sum on our previous occashens and think it's questionabl if Ay improoves the flavior o' the supe. Is the corse o' these remarx, it is understood that the amorus bird o' h'Avon is left out o' the question, whom apears to hev become a sort of a fixter, and sumthing in the mode over the footlites, like one o' 'is pieces nowadays ef if the managjer what undertook to bring out one o' 'is plays was a sort of martyr and deserved the supprt o' the play-goin public for 'is sacrifice, and they do say that, as a prommis, Shakspercan actors is usually the most ragid dressi and the poorest fed o' the hole dramatick perfesshn. Ev'dently, e was not the person cum Shake referred to as

"Wot a hass you was, to come back, go to—"

And, by the wa, if a ad sed 'one that as two coats to is stunick," a woodn't a bin far out, for some o' these professionals as to put up with and fare, and I have known one whilst lived for a fue months in a set o' lambrahins, a pair o' leather trass breeches, one sandal, a plate o' wax apples, a paste buckle and a sord—instways so a told me. That's the legitimit way—ave glowry and noe grubb. Latterally, our managers hev a way o' their own for the publick's ther pockets by runnin the big bizness into the ground, and when that's plaid out they make a perdigious chamsior o' gongs and tin pans, and bribes the critter ones critic, and announces a return to the legitimit—which means the 'Blood Red Knife,' the 'Sanguinairy Pirate,' and other ole favorites o' that skool, fixed up with moral tficls, to represent the standard dramary. The proprietors of our concert hauls come the same dodge when the amusment sector of consert fails and favor with Hop in a Bunch and the Ded March in Sawl. The sentimentle Drarmer, which includes the Domestick Ditto, is almost went out o' vogue—folks here not believin in that sort of gammon. I judge by my wife and the parties present when I was that a woman coo feelins has been imposed onto doan't bust into tiers, and cluase her ands and goes down on er knees a psalm to the gallery. Noo, not she! Mear Biddy sits greazes the griddel or the cooky pot and puts into her colinader, which is the stiff our crotinas is made of! The lokle dramny is sooy generose; it doan't depend upon talent so much as lungs. There is allways a poor broken down millionaire, a service rowdy with a art in 'is bussum, as eventully marries the hero's sister, a lady's maid, a sarvent from a herring boat or a dead sol or a fer; and a ole Jew Pagin, oo buys up stolen tribes; and a low comedy chap and a scannick servant, and a pooty waiter a doll and bleet, and the rest ole fashiond mellor dramny is still in full bleat at sum theatres, into which all the drammatick personys fights each to deth, except them what's poisoned or drownded. The Irish dramny is always popular, into which Billy Florette or Barny O'Flynne, after a fue walkins in parsnips the hero is dide, and sings' Cuss-ve-Machree, and dyes a more affectin' deth in rags an' tatters, goes hoam to his gilded pallish to a champane supper with oysters. The sceonick dramny is top o' the heap, and a play that hasn't got a harakeish into it, or a conflagration, or a real catarack, aint nowheres. Has for the ballet and the spankles, they has ardly be lookt upon as drammy. Padd'n does wonders tho', if it eventilly kills the padders. We ad it at the Grand Jim Fisbery Garks awl that abdominal ov wether, and the intelligent publick went to see it, and shuddered at sich hahumanity—and kept shudderin awl summer. And—I must tel it, thof I dies for it—only the other night there was a seen where the pierless Babell, inspering up to the futlights, slipt onto a piece of orang piel that had been lanchi from the gal-ery, and fell kerplump under the noas off the leeder, oo defended iself with a baton. Has then suthin was red in bust, and or blood (which it was awrdust) poured out on the stalg and flooed into the orchester. Then was a time of it. And now, as the parsons say, "Wun wurd mear and I have done." Not long sence a tragedy was produced at wull ov the theaters, with a stab or the fust magitude in the prinsippie roal. But the stab didn't happen to wus a favorite behind the scenes, so what does the caul boy do but he ups and bies a go-it (a reggilar rollickin' ram from a shorter ows round the corner), and ties it in a balconny box without is supper. The stab came on and struck out rite manfully into Amlit's sillokwy, vith the follerin effec:—

To be or not to be—that is the quaschn.
Whether 'tis better in the mind to suffer
(Go-it from the gal-ery—"Ba-ah !")
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
(Go-it—"Ba-a-h !")
Or by opposing end them.
(Go-it, fercely—"Ba-a-h !")

ACTON, looking up.—If de feller wat do dat wentreloquise will jes step down here a minnit his goat will receeve de tallest kind of a lammin, or my name aint Gunderesen!

At that juncture the go-it shooted the action to the word by rushin onto the stage (avin ben released by the caul boy), and when I came away se was buttin it into Amlet's rear, whom we'd upset, at the rate of 1:37, and all the sujens ystin and flootin like mad.

Yoorse, SPITFIRE.

City Summary.

ALL ABOARD !—We are now high-daddy in the way of amusements, and if this great metropolis of the western world can swallow all that's offered, and pay for it, then she's all our fancy painted her, and more, too. To-night, Monday, Oct. 10th, will witness performances at eighteen establishments, viz.:—Wallack's, with the "Two Roses," just transplanted from Britain's sea-girt shore; Olympic, with the cunning Fox and his "Wee Willie Winkie" pantomime; Niblo's, with Lotta and "Little Nell;" Bowery, with the "Old Straw Man" and "Footmarks in the Snow;" Booth's, with the sleepy Jefferson and his old "Rip;" Grand Opera House, with Maitland, Silly, "Little Faust" and Jim Fisk, Jr.; French Theatre, Seeoach and German undefiled; Theatre Comique, with its "White Elephant" burlesque and that variety which is the spice of life; the Globe, with Lisa Weber and 50 other artists; San Francisco Minstrels, with its dark side of life; Wood's, with its Kirally Troupe and a thousand other attractions; Lina Edwin's, with Eliza Weathersby, Stuart Robson and fun generally; Kelly & Leon's Minstrels, with Kneelson, burlesque and other pencilings on the blackboards; Tony Pastor's, with burlesque, dance, song, and a little of everything; New York Circus, with the funny clowns and tamed fiery steeds; Fifth Avenue, with its "Man and Wife;" Stadt Theatre, with its un-broken Dutch; and the Academy of Music, with Januauschek and her broken tongue. Besides these, there are "Anatomical Museums," concerts, dives, and so forth. Here we have enough to suit all tastes, with prices to accommodate all pockets. Can we support all these places? inquires a gentleman from one of the "provincial cities." We think so, but it's not a sure thing that all will keep their heads above water; and if all are supported, no manager will get very rich, because where the equiv. is fairly divided somebody must suffer. As it is now, no place is 'crowded from parquet to dome," you will understand, no matter what the papers say; you can get a seat anywhere, provided you have the price, and this is just at the opening. Managers will have to up a success of gratification with it if they would avoid a balloon ascension; and when they have a good thing, let the public know it through the aid of printers' ink. "We have said," as "Spotted Tail" remarked.

NILSSON pegs out to-night. Her several concerts have been well attended, but not crowded; she failed to create any great degree of enthusiasm, notwithstanding the puffing and claque system adopted by the managers. American people are not so easily led away now-a-days as they formerly were; they understand and judge for themselves, instead of permitting the press to manufacture public opinion for them. Besides, three and four dollars for a ticket to hear a singer who is no better than Kellogg or Parepa-Rosa is not treating the American public fairly, and should this new-fangled Swedish Nightingale come again she had better come down in her prices. Her agent is "billing" the Philadelphia market just now; they think a good deal about three or four dollars in that "immaculate village," and when they pay that much money to hear an artist sing, they are apt to express themselves rather freely if that artist doesn't come up to promises. Besides this, the press of that city is apt to go counter to what the New York press said, just to let us know that the "metropolis" can't speak for them. A great deal will depend on how the agent has fixed things in Philadelphia.

THE FASCINATING MONTALAND, the artistic Silly, the comical Hittemans, aided by numerous other French artists, still continue to attract large audiences at the Grand Opera House, where the performance of "Le Petit Faust" charms the sense of hearing with delicious music, and of sight with gorgeous scenery, shapely limbs neatly costumed and beautiful faces wreathed with bewitching smiles.

THE "RIVALS" proved such a strong attraction at Wallack's Theatre that it held possession of the boards during the entire past week, and attracted large audiences. It was withdrawn after the performance on the 8th, and this evening, Monday, Oct. 10th, J. H. Albery's comedy, entitled the 'Two Roses," will be produced. This comedy, on its production at the Vaudeville Theatre, London, Eng., created an intense sensation among theatre goers, on account of so great a success having been achieved by a hitherto unfried author. He had only previously appeared before the public as the author of a dramatization which he called "Doctor Davey," and which proved a work of considerable merit, and obtained the praise of the judicious. However, between the best adaptation and the humblest original work there exists as much difference as between an original design and a copy of a picture. The "Two Roses" is entirely original, and at once found favor with the public, and it is still enjoying a highly successful run in London. The plot was evidently suggested by the following lines from Massinger:—

The queen of flowers, the glory of the spring,
The sweetest comfort to our smell, the rose,
Sprang from an envious briar, I may infer
There's such disparity in their conditions
Between the fathers of a house, the daughter,
And the base churl, her father."

The briar in this comedy, from which spring the twin roses, is one Digby Grant, who, though of good family, is much given to boasting; in fact, he is a needy adventurer, sponging on his friends and acquaintances and not shrinking at times from actions worse than dishonorable. He is a mixture of humbug, meanness and grandiloquence, and apparently unites in one character many of the qualities of Micawber, Pecksniff, M. Brigard in "Frou-Frou" and Robert Macaire. The roses that grow upon this parent stem are so dissimilar as to suggest that the relation existing between them is of adoption rather than birth. Both these girls are in love with two friends, whom they have met in a ramble through Kent. The elder, loves Jack Wyatt, and Ida, the younger, Caleb Deecie, a musician, who has been blind from birth, but who is blessed with an acuteness of hearing which produces results almost marvelous. The attentions of the two youths are received with evident favor by Mr. Grant, who borrows money from both and seems particularly anxious that the marriages, which will not only secure his daughters from want, but also seem to promise him a future shelter, shall with all decent haste be accomplished. A certain Mr. Furnival now appears upon the scene, bearing most important tidings; Mr. Grant, who is related to several wealthy families, has succeeded in proving himself, to all appearance, the owner of the De Chapperon estates, which are of very large value. A possible claimant stands between him and the property, who, however, has not been heard of for some years, and Mr. Furnival suggests that it is not likely he ever will turn up. Mr. Grant, therefore, with little reluctance, enters upon the property, and his first act is to dismiss the suitors of his daughters, who will now seek husbands in their new sphere of life. Mr. Grant now cancels with his checks the obligations which accrued in his days of poverty. The second act shows the two youths in their discomfiture, living together in apartments belonging to one Jenkins, a good natured bag man, whom a sour tempered wife is gradually converting into a street missionary. The two roses are less false than their former sweethearts believe them. Lottie, unknown to any one save the landlady, whom she has bribed to secrecy, has been watching over her lover, bringing him many little comforts, watching him, and blowing kisses to him through the keyhole. One of these visits occasions an exciting situation. Mr. De Chapperon, as Mr. Grant is now known, calls upon Jack Wyatt to demand an explanation why he continues to correspond with a lady whom he has been forbidden to see. His arrival has surprised Lottie, who is compelled to hide behind a curtain and listen to a dialogue between her father and her lover. She hears with pleasure Jack's avowal that he still loves her, and she hears him deny that he has held any correspondence whatever with her, and at length she witnesses a quarrel between the two men, during which Jack expresses to Mr. De Chapperon some opinions concerning his manhood, which the presence of Lottie and Ida, at the last meeting, had prevented him from expressing. Mr. De Chapperon becomes insulting, and Jack insists upon an apology and menaces him with a blow, to prevent which Lottie comes forth from her hiding place, and is seen by De Chapperon, though not by Jack. Struck with astonishment at finding his daughter in such a compromising position, the father makes the apology hitherto refused, and affords Lottie an opportunity to escape unseen. The third act shows Mr. De Chapperon on his estates, receiving presents and deputations, and conducting himself like a country gentleman. The girls are pining for their lost loves, and De Chapperon is sorely tried at seeing their failing health, and finding every animal on his estate, regardless of sex, christened Jack. Accident brings the young men to the house, and the courtship is tenderly renewed, under which the father chafes, but a great surprise is in store for him. Mr. Furnival appears with the intelligence that the missing link has been found, the man so long sought has turned up, and the rightful owner of the De Chapperon estates is Caleb Deecie, Jack's friend and Ida's blind suitor. Paternal consent is now given, and the marriages are immediately arranged.

MISS MARIETTA RAVEL commenced a brief star engagement at the Bowery Theatre, on Monday, Oct. 3d, when a new sensational drama in four acts, by John De Bonay, entitled "Jargtine; or, the Pride of the 14th," was produced for the first time upon any stage. The drama was written expressly for Miss Ravel, who assumes some five distinct characters in the course of its representation, as follows:—Jargune, a vivandiere of the 14th; Antoine Bon Gros, a recruit; a French soldier, a Mexican dancing girl, and a Mexican boy. The characters in the early portion of the play are technically termed "speaking parts," while those in the closing acts are pantomimic. The play was well mounted, costumed and acted. Miss Ravel identified herself with the various characters and acted them well. Her pantomimic action is very graceful and expressive. The play has pleased the audiences who have witnessed it, and we doubt not the public elsewhere will be equally charmed with this addition to Miss Ravel's repertoire. The business during the week was good.

AN ATTRACTIVE PROGRAMME, artistically rendered by favorite artists, served to attract excellent audiences during the entire past week to the San Francisco Minstrels. Their first part was very attractive and was composed of the following:—A ballad by Templeton, "Fairest of the Fairyland," which was charmingly sung; a Tyrolean song by Oberst; a comic song, "Have You Seen My Nelly?" by Charley Backus, conversed the audience with laughter; Wambold rendered the ballad "Little Footsteps" in a manner to win a hearty encore; Billy Birch sang "I've Lost My Bow-Wow," in his inimitable style, Dwyer rendered a ballad, "The Flowers Were Blooming," effectively, and the "Railroad Overture" closed this part of the entertainment. In the second part Queen and West appeared as the "Rival Darkies;" Rollin Howard in "Have You to Decide?" Backus, West, Wambold, Emmett and Birch were very funny in an act called "Laughing Gas;" Queen appeared as the "Dancing Octoroon," and West as the "Man with a Wart on his Nose." In the burlesque on "Man and Wife," Oberist, Emmett, Backus and Howard created a deal of fun and the act will be continued till further notice.

MR. SHERIDAN, the well-known song and dance performer with Mr. [illegible] was presented during the past week with a baby girl child. Mr. Sheridan has danced much better since the event.

SOPHIE WORRELL was in town on the 10th inst.

KITTIE BLANCHARD presented her husband, McKee Rankin, with a twelve pound daughter on the morning of the 8th inst.

"WEE WILLIE WINKIE," a new pantomime by George L. Fox, was produced at the Olympic Theatre on Wednesday evening, Oct. 5th, for the first time, before an audience which filled the theatre in every part. The pantomime is divided into two acts, the first of which, embracing six scenes, is occupied in the elaboration of the story, while the second embraces the pantomime proper, and is divided into sixteen scenes. For a first night's performance it was a marvel in its way. Never do we recollect seeing an initial performance where there were so few hitches or contre temps; during these fifteen scenes, full of tricks, requiring elaborate mechanism to develop their effects, only two minor ones partially failed. The scenery is excellent, the transformation at the end of the first act being one of the finest specimens of coloring we ever witnessed, and presented the effect of a fine water color. The transformation at the end of the second act is very elaborate in design and finish. All the scenes of the pantomime were freshly painted. Among the auxiliary features introduced were Professor Maximillian, a prestidigitateur, and little Jennie Yeamans, a precocious child vocalist. Of the former we can say that his performances could be omitted without detriment to the enjoyment of the audience, his tricks being old and not skillfully performed, or a change of feats may render him an attraction. Little Jennie Yeamans, a beautiful child of some five or six years, sang several songs in character, which were most rapturously received by the audience. She has an archness of manner and grace of movement, especially with her arms, which is rarely found, even in those many years her senior. She is probably the most promising prodigy that has appeared since the debut of the Bateman children, and unless her faculties are dulled by overwork in her younger years, she should occupy a high position in time to come. George L. Fox is looked upon as the best pantomimic clown of the French school now upon the stage in either hemisphere; his movements are graceful and agile; his face wonderfully expressive, and his performances are remarkably chaste and free from even suggestive vulgarity. Mr. George Beane was a fair Pantaloon, and we doubt not that subsequent performances will render him popular. Mr. R. Honeywood, the Harlequin, an English artist, who made his first appearance in America upon this occasion, is a fair dancer, and his performance proved quite acceptable. Miss Fanny Beane, the Columbine, performed that laborious role with credit to herself and to the satisfaction of the audience. A military company of children of both sexes of the age of twelve or thirteen years, supposed to represent the Ninth regiment, Col. James Fisk, Jr., commanding, performed some marches and military evolutions with precision. The youth who represented Col. Fisk was a very creditable burlesque imitation of that gentleman's appearance and movements. A Lilliputian drum corps was attached to the regiment. The pantomime as a whole is by far superior to any hitherto produced at this house, and ought to have a long run. The music was excellent, and Mr. F. Strebinger is deserving of great credit for its arrangement. Nearly all the tricks are new and of a complicated nature. The true aim of pantomime is, we hold, to amuse the youthful mind, and from their enjoyment we may judge of its success. A bright eyed little fellow of some eight or nine years, who occupied an adjoining seat, was bubbling over with mirth and laughter from the beginning to the end, and so heartily did he express his delight at the various scenes before him that it became infectious, and many in the immediate vicinity more keenly appreciated the fun from sympathy with this youth. The first matinee was given on the 8th, and hence forth matinees will be given on Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week.

THE VICTORELLI FAMILY—Henry and his pupil, and Miss Annie Victorelli—left for Europe per the City of Paris, on the 8th inst. They purpose returning about April next.

THE OPENING OF THE GLOBE THEATRE was accomplished on Oct. 3d with a successful result. Every available space in the entire auditorium was occupied, and a cordial welcome was extended to the various artists who appeared. During the week the performance was as follows:—After the overture a laughable little sketch entitled the "Grand Central vs. Fifth Avenue" was very well acted by John Hart, Add Ryman and G. L. Stout, at the conclusion of which Miss Eloise Clyde sang several ballads effectively. Then Moas. Tanner introduced his performing dogs and monkeys, including the trick monkey Leotard, who gave a wonderful gymnastic exhibition, very closely imitating the actions of a human being. Hughey Dougherty delivered a burlesque stump speech, which touched on the principal topics of the day, and had the merit of being not only very funny, but the witticisms were fresh. Sheridan and Mack appeared in their double songs and dances with quick changes, which were admirably performed. They evince a keen appreciation of character, and their changes are performed with remarkable rapidity. They first appeared as an old grey haired couple and sang a character song; then they executed the song and dance entitled the "Nerves," and subsequently another entitled "You Hear no Noise," followed by an Irish character song and dance. These young men have made great and rapid improvement in their business. The comic sketch entitled "Ham-u-let" was rendered in a laughable manner by Add Ryman, John Hart and G. L. Stout. Master Barney gave a number of Tautonic songs in that style which has rendered his name celebrated. Signor Costa's ballet d'action served to introduce Miles. Betty Rigi, Devere and Bertha as principals, the Misses Sallie Maddox and Julia Sanford as seconds and a full corps de ballet, composed of young ladies with shapely figures and comely faces. Mlle. Betty Rigi danced an adagio called "America," also a grand variation, which were deservedly applauded. Mlle. Devere performed a variation which evinced much skill and established her claims as a good artist, which may likewise be said of the solo executed by Mlle. Bertha. The ballet as a whole was a pleasing performance. Miss Agnes Sutherland, who possesses a rich, powerful soprano voice, sang some ballads which were deservedly encored. Then Andy McKee, song and dance artist, appeared in a contortion song and dance, which convulsed the audience with laughter. Moas. Caron and his two little sons then executed a number of gymnastic feats in a skilful and graceful manner. Vivian sang a number of character songs selected from the latest compositions; he has a good voice, a good presence and his manner is easy and pleasing. The performance concluded with Brough's burlesque entitled "Eruani; or the Horn of a Dilemma," with the Misses Lisa Weber, Belle Howitt, Hattie O'Neil, Cassie Troy, H. Byron, Messrs. D. Sheridan, George Atkins, W. Stout, J. Mack, W. E. Crosbie and Mr. Campbell, in the cast. Miss Weber appeared as attractive as ever and played the part of Ernani with dash and spirit; Miss Belle Howitt looked charmingly in the character of Don Carlos, and introduced the song "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark," which she rendered so effectively as to gain an encore. Hattie Atkins, as Iaga, was very funny, and during the performance he indulged in some wonderful facial contortions, which excited the risibilities of the audience. He is a good burlesque actor, and his performance was one of the leading features of the evening. All the other characters were acceptably rendered. During the week the business has been large, and everything seems to indicate a successful continuance of a season which has opened thus auspiciously. The attaches of the house are affable and courteous. For this evening, Oct. 10th, Prince Sadi d'Jaima, the "man serpent," is announced, and the Lisa Weber burlesque troupe will appear in "Somnambula."

THE KIRALFY BALLET AND PANTOMIME TROUPE, numbering some SIXTY persons, have appeared at Wood's Museum during the past week to good business and to the general satisfaction of the patrons of this house. Their dances display a wonderful activity and grace of motion, and their entire entertainment is very pleasing. The Saxon Infant Ballet Troupe, which forms a portion of the entertainment, is composed of a number of children, from six to eight years of age, who are remarkably precocious, and in the pantomime of "Humpty Dumpty, Jr.," they display a degree of aptness for the business hardly expected at their age. The present week is the last of their engagement, as on Oct. 17th the Lydia Thompson Burlesque Troupe will commence an engagement, appearing in the burlesque entitled "Lurline."

"MAN AND WIFE" is announced for continued representation at the Fifth Avenue Theatre. It had been the intention of the management to produce other plays on three nights of the week, but the demands for seats as witness "Man and Wife" was so great that no interruption in the success of this play will take place at present.

DURING LAST FALL an exhibition of Gustave Dore's paintings was held at Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street, which attracted considerable notice. The principal paintings comprised "Dante and Virgil in Hell" and "Jeptha's Daughter." The owner seems to have got into difficulty of some kind, and the paintings were sold by the Sheriff on Saturday, 8th inst. There were but few persons present and competition was not brisk; the two pictures only brought $1,000 each, not one-fifth of their value, and it is thought that they were bought in for their owner. Some sketches in crayon, by the same artist, were also sold, bringing $100 each.

LOTTA has found in Sam Willoughby a part which enables her to display her natural vivacious qualities as thoroughly as if the part had been especially written for her. "The Ticket of Leave Man" has been too often acted in this city to require more than a passing notice at this time. The play was well cast and well acted. Mr. Frank Lawler may be especially commended for his acting of Bob Brierly, and for the excellence of his dialect. The average business of the week was good. On this evening, Oct. 10th, Lotta will re-appear as Little Nell and the Marchioness in the play of that name, and the following artists will appear in the cast:—Messrs. Vining Bowers, Felix Rogers, Sol Smith, A. Fitzgerald, T. E. Morris, John Trainor, Misses Buchanan, Hind, Merrett, Le Brun and Brutone. During the course of the representation Lotta will introduce some new banjo solos, will participate in a new duet, execute a clog dance, and sing Theresa's last Parisienne sensational song called "A Tyrolean Duck Song." Novelties are presented in rapid succession and great energy is displayed by the management, which, we are glad to state is rewarded by the public in their liberal patronage. The business of the past week was good.

AT LINA EDWIN'S THEATRE, during the past week, a dramatization of Charles Dickens' novel of "Barnaby Rudge" has been performed to fair houses. It is almost impossible to dramatize any one of this great author's novels in such a manner as to give complete satisfaction to a miscellaneous audience. Any attempt to crowd the principal incidents of one of these works into a representation which is limited to some two hours and a half, must necessarily present but a sketch of many important points, which the imagination and recollection of the auditor who is familiar with the story must fill up. Such has been the case in the present instance, and we may say that the drama has been especially constructed with a view to making Simon Tappertit the principal character. Mr. Stuart Robson gave a careful and exceedingly humorous impersonation of Simon Tappertit. He seemed to grasp all the salient points of the character and to elaborate them artistically, and his performance from the commencement until the end was brimful and running o'er with mir the 'Marble Heart' was given, with Barrett in the double role of Phidias and Raphael, and Mr. Macauley as Diogenes and Volaga, in which he divided honors with the star. The Marco of Miss Bailey was very fair. To-night (Friday) evening; Hamlet, Friday, for his benefit; Saturday, matinee, Hamlet, Monday, and night, Macbeth.....While the tragic muse holds sway at this house, at the Olympic Momus reigns supreme, and merry Clown, luckless Pantaloon and skirping Harlequin and Columbine, by their funny tricks and graceful evolutions, serve to drive away dull care and make us look upon the stern realities of the outside world with a lighter heart. The Fox & Denier Combination opened Monday, the 3d, in the 'Three Blind Mice' pantomime. The company is composed of—well, most everything—burlesque artists, dancers, pantomimists, skater, spade dancer, and, par excellence, Tony Denier as Clown and Charley Fox as Pantaloon. Mr. Stanton is a very good Harlequin, and Mr. Burke sings his Irish songs with much spirit. Denier's wooden-headed acrobats are clever pieces of mechanism. Crowded houses are the order here, also.”

ROBERT MCWADE commenced a week's engagement at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., on the 3d inst., presenting his own dramatization of “Rip Van Winkle,” which held the boards the entire week, and attracted uniformly good audiences. The piece was produced in a manner which reflects great credit upon the management. The scenery was mostly new and gotten up expressly for this piece. McWade's version differs considerably from Boucicault's, as played by Jefferson, and in many respects different altogether. Mr. McWade's personation of Rip was a well conceived and well executed piece of acting throughout. There is a peculiar freshness characterizing Mr. McWade's acting which is very enjoyable. The support rendered was satisfactory. Mrs. Myron won frequent rounds of applause for her capital portrayal of Eda, wife of old Rip; Miss Kate Quinton sustained the role of Alice in a pleasing manner, while Miss De Forrest was all that could be desired as Steenie Van Winkle. Mr. John Ferris gave an effective rendering to the part of Van Hector. Mr. C. Hilyard as Leopold Van Hector did the character full justice. The rest of his characters found able representatives in Messrs. D. B. Van Deerin, W. E. Coleman, J. P. Stiner and John Hurst. Mr. Albert Aiken is the next attraction, opening on the 10th, for one week, in his new sensational play, “The Witches of New York.” So writes our correspondent “Mose” on Oct. 8th.

OF DETROIT THEATRICALS, our correspondent “Frank,” writing Oct. 8th, says:—“Oliver Doud Byron opened at the Opera House, on Oct. 3d, as Joe Ferris, in the new sensational drama entitled ‘Across the Continent.’ It made a decided hit and retained the boards all the week, the attendance increasing with each representation. Mr. Byron is a finished actor, never overdoing his characters, but presenting them in a true, life-like manner. Mr. B. received excellent support from the members of the stock company. ‘Across the Continent’ will be continued part, and probably all of the week ending Oct. 15th. Manager Lanergan is sparing no pains nor expense to make this place one of the best in the country.”

Over twelve hundred seats are said to have been secured in advance for their performances during the week ending on the 1st. They were at Young Men's Hall, Detroit, Mich., on the 6th, 7th and 8th, where, although the opera house is open, their receipts were much larger than a fair corresponding number of nights last year, when they had no opposition. The claims of these ladies and the fine programme presented had the effect of attracting a large and fashionable audience. The performances commenced with Offenbach's comic opera, “The Prima Donna for a Night,” and the rendering of the various morceaux incidental to it was in every way most satisfactory. Miss Maggie Harold obtaining very warm applause for the ballad, ‘They Think I Have Forgotten Thee.’” Mrs. Pyne Galton was a very amusing representation of Monsieur Choufleri. Variety Halls.

OF THE VARIETY SHOWS in Memphis, Tenn., our correspondent, writing on Oct. 5th, says:—“Business never has been so good as now at Broom's Opera House. On Saturday, 1st, the largest number of people were crammed in the house that ever filled any variety show in this city. Master Bennie is most decidedly the card of the Opera House. Miss Helene De Vere has returned to the scene of her former triumphs—her reception amounted to an ovation. Miss Susie Starr is still the danseuse of the establishment. Miss Culnum is a vocalist of more than ordinary power and sweetness. Miss Lottie, a dancer and actress of more than average ability, remains. Mrs. C. L. Howard, a wizard, has been added to the company. Miss Emma Devoy and Miss Anne Blake are underlined. .....The Varieties Theatre is not behind the times in attractiveness. Charley White is straining every nerve to make the thing go—full houses reward his efforts. They present a very attractive programme in the singing, dancing, acting and gymnastic line. Miss Leslie is the central figure in the terpsichorean act. Melville and Fisher keep the people on the broad grin whenever they show their comic doings, while Miss Emma Clifton is by far the best in her specialties that has ever appeared in a variety show here. She is handsome in person, a good vocalist, a superb dresser and a fine dancer, while none of her songs are stale; and last, not least in merit, stand the Torres Brothers, who, as gymnasts, rank with any in the country at the present day.”

SEVERAL CHANGES were recently made in the company at the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C. Billy Diamond, Charley Brown and Zoyara left on the 1st inst.; Clara Butler, vocalist, after filling an engagement of six weeks, retired on the 8th. The new faces last week were Bowman and Harris, song and dance men; Jennie Gilbert, songstress, and M'lle Gracie and Harry Clark, in their thrilling feats on the trapeze. Bowman and Harris are very good performers; they do a double song and dance in the most approved style, besides appearing on the ends in the minstrel scene. M'lle Gracie and Harry Clarke give quite a remarkable performance on the trapeze. It is a novelty here to see a female go through the various feats on the trapeze in conjunction with a male performer. They remained but one week, having closed on the 8th. Estelle Forrest, noted in my last as having commenced an engagement at this house on the 26th ult., remained but two nights. She appeared under the name of Hyams. G. W. Jester, the man with the talking hand, is announced to commence on the 10th. So writes our correspondent, “Novice.”

AT DAN SHELBY'S EXCHANGE THEATRE, Indianapolis, Ind., a correspondent, writing on Oct. 6th, says:—“The business has been excellent, the houses having been crowded nightly. The present attraction consists of the female minstrels, Agnes Robinson, Belle St. Leon, Annie Williams, Malinda Nagle, Blanche Chapman and Nora Irwin, headed by the comedians Fox and Smith, with J. C. Clarke as interlocutor. Bob Smith appeared in a tamborine solo and made a hit; A. R. Campbell sang a burlesque on the song, ‘Crossing o'er the Ferry;’ Charley King, a banjo solo, Annie Williams in a medley dance, Belle St. Leon, in the song, ‘Goodby, Sweetheart,’ was excellent. Fox and Smith, in an act entitled ‘Big and Little Hat,’ were very funny. Agnes Robinson sang several ballads. Dick Gorman, song and dance, is underlined to appear on Oct. 10th. The state fair is in session and will continue through the week, which, it is thought, will tend to make business lively at all the places of amusement.”

AT THE METROPOLITAN, Indianapolis, Ind., the company has been strengthened by the addition of the following artists:—Johnny Shay, song and dance artist; Amy de Brent, song and dance. Gus Williams appeared on Oct. 1st, in his character songs and changes, and made a hit. In the minstrel performance Oscar Willis and Johnny Shay have appeared on the ends. Amy de Brent is a fine singer and has become very popular here. In the burlesque in a double song and dance, also a double clog, are good. Angusta Lamereaux is ill and has not appeared for the past few nights. Johnny Shay made a hit in his “India Rubber” song and dance, being encored some five times, on the 8th. Eagan, the new comic de Ethiope, who put in an appearance on the 3d inst., has made a hit in his song and dance of “Snsie's Sunday Out” and his addresses “to his constituency.” Carlton in his Hibernian jigs and melodies, especially those of “When Pat came over the Hill,” with quadrupedal imitations, and “The Dublin Dancing Master,” is received with enthusiastic plaudits. Miss Bessie Sudlow, serio-comic vocalist, has won golden opinions. Her rendition of “Sweet Spirit Hear my Prayer” and “By Killarney's Lakes and Vales” is truly excellent. J. S. Edwards has introduced two new songs in cork, entitled “I'm a Poor Old Moke,” with revolutionary recollections, and “Fifty Years Ago,” which, on account of the patriotic sentiment contained in them, are each night rapturously encored. Edwards has also written a travesty on “Hamlet,” himself appearing as the melancholy Dane and W. H. Eagan as Ophelia. It is very good and highly diverting in its ludicrous situations. The solo dances of Miss Maggie Wesner and Katie Wilson display grace and beauty of figure. Sam Devere, in his banjo solos, witticisms and conundrums and Dutch character in the sketch of the “Intelligence Office” is very funny. The ballets of “Les Naides” and “La Petit Faust” disclose a bevy of beauty and a witchery of movements that cannot be surpassed. The orchestra is under the leadership of Prof. Charles Rhinehardt. On Monday, 10th, Mlle. Annetti Galletti, premiere danseuse, and Billy Burgess, Ethiopian comedian, will appear.....At Ralber's Odeon business continues excellent. WRAY'S THEATRE COMIQUE, Rochester, N. Y., continues to draw full houses, and the performances are popular. Miss Lena Clark is in her last week of engagement; her voice is sweet, whether executing some of the high est or lowest notes of the register, and correct at all times. Miss Emma Marsh, danseuse, is popular, and she never fails to elicit numerous encores; Miss Kitty Henderson and Geo. F. Moore dress their double song and dance finely; Miss Annie Harrison does a dance gracefully; Joe Moil, Geo. Edwards and Frank Benton, are also popular. At the New Winter Garden Miss Nellie Hallaway, Miss Maud De Lisle and Miss Mollie St. Martins, all balladists, have appeared newly this week. Miss De Lisle is quite popular. Petite Lizzie, a youthful miss, who sings and dances, is another addition. The double acts of Ned Harrigan and Sam Rickey continue to hit folks hard. This week they have one styled ‘Big and Little of It,’ and, in conjunction with Master Hart, personate the ‘Bismarckians.’ Next (this) week Otto Burbank and Nellie Taylor are to be added.....At the Alhambra an edition of the Can-can, edited by Harry Alberts, was put on Monday night and has been a furious success. Annie Florence personates Frailty in rollicking style, and Maggie Mortimer does ‘Living Statues’ excellently. Carrie Austin's ballads and Neal Conway's dancing also take well. This week Marsh Adams, basso, and Harry Wilkinson, comedian, have been added. J. P. Hill has been doing the past week, a very fine trapeze act on a swing elevated some fifty feet above the heads of the audience. He has very much improved of late as a gymnast..... At the Race Street Theatre the Hawley brothers were added this week, and have done well as cloggists. Four end men have been put on—for a change—Hen Mason and John Hawley as bones, and Johnny Weaver and Frank Hawley as tambos. A new local drama, gotten up by Mason, was put on Monday, and has proved a winning card. It is called ‘A Peep at Cincinnati,’ and is a sort of condensation of “A Glance at New York.’ The whole company is cast, and the piece takes well.....There have been no changes to note at the Academy of Music, which is mildly flourishing.”

THE LAURENCE TROUPE opened at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., Monday, Oct. 3d, but did not make a very favorable impression. Bertie, a representative of classical statuary; Chrissie Morrel, a favorite vocalist; Jake Budd, the able stage manager; Frank Gayton, manipulator of the tamborine; Nachmann's boys, very clever clever dancers, are still in the Academy. AT CAPT. KELLY'S THEATRE COMIQUE, Toledo, Ohio, the following new company appeared during the week ending Oct. 8th:—Prof. Lucker, leader of Orchestra; John Nielan, bones; John Fielding, tambo; Fillie Antonio, Maggie Fielding and Ari Holston.

A GOOD BILL is on this week at the Varieties Theatre, St. Louis, Mo. Sunday evening, the 2d inst., the performance commenced with the farce of “Hiram Dodge,” with Frank Curtis in the title role and Mlle. Eveline as Jerusha. This was followed by solo, in which Mlle. Bertha sings a song. E. M. Hall does an immense banjo solo, Jimmie Leslie a good medley clog, La Belle Ida a very beautiful ballad entitled, “Father is a Drunkard,” and Signor Constantine and Mlle. Eveline one of their pantomimes called “Coco.” The whole concludes with a new drama by Frank Frayne entitled ‘Orolooso; or, the Half Breed's Revenge,’ in which Frank Frayne assumes the title role. It is, decidedly, a sensational piece, having a realized scene and numerous startling situations pretty well worked up. Hi. Chapman plays Mark Rollins with credit, and Frank Curtis is good as Simon Slap. The four blondes, Mlle. Oberti, Mlle. Brunetti, Mlle. Idalie and Mlle. Constane commenced on Monday, the 3d, appearing in the grand “Blonde Can Can.”.....Carroll's Varieties is not behind hand in attractions, and, last week, announces the appearance of more stars, consisting of Maggie Louise, the “only female bone soloist,” and Johnny Murphy, champion bone player and Ethiopian comedian. Joe Woods still hangs out the banner for the boys, and Ettie Barker sings some charming songs. Billy Scott has control of the stage.....Joe Henry's Sixth Street Varieties is doing a big business. Billy Pash, banjoist, opened here on the 1st inst., having returned from a trip to New Orleans and Vicksburg. Joe Garland is good in his songs and Dutch business, and Signor Roberto does some interesting juggling feats. The performance ends nightly with the Mobille “Can-Can,” with Miss Lulu Fortescue as Frailty. So writes our correspondent, “Agra,” on Oct. 8th.

ALEX. ZANFRETTA, Frank Zanfretta, Josephine Zanfretta, Frank Bell, Sig. Pedanto and Mr. Causeland made their first bow this season to the Pittsburgh public at the Varieties Theatre, on Oct. 3d. The Zanfretta Family perform rope walking, rope dancing, gymnastics, stilt exercises and pantomime, and are good in each of these features. Everything they attempt is well done, and every act is encored. Frank Bell does a song and dance, which is encored nightly. His singing is not particularly good, but he does a sort of wild, grotesque dance that is immense in its own peculiar way. Pedanto in the air, head downwards, is an unique and creditable performance. Causeland's musical act would be good if it was a little more dignified. Maffit and Bartholomew's Pantomime Troupe commenced a nine nights' engagement at this establishment on the 6th inst. to a large audience. The performance of this troupe was good in every respect. James S. Budworth, Dutch and Ethiopian comedian, also made his first appearance on this occasion, and was the recipient of a cordial welcome. Nearly all of the old favorites remain, and the company is probably the strongest variety combination ever seen in this city, and to Manager Aims must be awarded the credit of bringing together these attractions..... Mons. T. A. Delave and the female gymnasts, Lilia and Zoe; Powers and Johnston, song and dance men; Polly Daly, vocalist, and Harry Robinson, are the new people at the Academy of Music this week. The double transept flight, as given by Lilia and Zoe, from the dome of the theatre, is one of the best acts of the kind that has been seen here this season, and the performance is nightly greeted by the audience with cheers and applause. Zoe occasionally falls in the net, but the little mishap is only a prelude to a successful and daring feat—that of turning a somersault in mid-air to a single rope one inch thick. Powers and Johnston are artists. Their double songs and dances are excellent, and are encored. Harry Robinson's musical diversion is a good performance, and Polly Daly sings cleverly. Each entertainment this week concludes with a military drama, in three acts, entitled “The Fall of Sedan; or, the Surrender of Napoleon.” The play was written by two young aspiring journalists of Pittsburgh, and as a literary production it possesses no merit, its plot and dialogue being of a most common place character, but its thrilling situations and combat in the dome of the theatre, a success, and perhaps as much to the production of “The Fall of Sedan” as to anything else must be attributed the cause of the large attendance at the Academy of Music this week. The Heath Zouaves are the representatives of the French army in the drama, and perform their part well. All of the principal characters are satisfactorily cast, and the piece is put on the stage in good style. So writes our correspondent on Oct. 6th.

Negro Minstrelsy.

GEORGE WILKES, the female impersonator of Billy Emerson's Minstrels, died in Memphis, Tenn., on Oct., 1st, of neuralgia of the stomach. During his brief illness he received the kindest treatment from Mr. Emerson and every member of his company. His real name was George Miller, and his remains were taken to Philadelphia, his native place, where his mother and sisters now reside. He was a clever performer, and was highly respected and esteemed by his brother professionals. In another column will be found a card of thanks to Billy Emerson and his company for their kindness to the deceased, from George W. Charles, in which the mother and sisters of the deceased join in the expression of their gratitude.

ADA TESMAN'S FEMALE MINSTRELS gave one entertainment at the Opera House, Elmira, N. Y., on Wednesday evening, Oct. 5th, to a full house. Miss Tesman and Miss Somers made a hit, each being repeatedly encored. Roome, in his banjo solo, was called out six times. Miss Minnie Wells, in her jig, was good. The Stevens Sisters were by no means behind.

TOM BAKER, an Ethiopian comedian, formerly with Skiff and Gaylord's Minstrels, died recently in the City Hospital at Memphis, Tenn., of congestion of the brain, aged 32 years, leaving a wife in Philadelphia, Pa. Our correspondent writes that “his last moments were soothed by his friends, J. W. Sercley and Ned Streight. Nearly all the members of the Varieties, Broom's Opera House, the Parlor Music Hall and Emerson's Minstrels attended his funeral. A fine brass band, composed of members of the above companies, discoursed their solemn strains over poor Tom's last resting place.”

EMERSON'S MINSTRELS closed an engagement in Memphis, Tenn., on Oct. 1st, and went from there to Cairo, Ill. They will commence a brief engagement in Louisville, Ky., on the 10th, and after will re-organize for the winter season and then appear in Cincinnati, O., on the 24th.

QUILTER AND GOLDRICK, double song and dance and jig performers, state that they can be engaged after Nov. 1st. Their address is care of this office.

THE DELEHANTY, HENGLER AND BLOODGOOD COMBINATION is billed to appear in Ogdensburg, N. Y., on Oct. 13th. They are billed to appear in Watertown, N. Y., 14th; Fulton 1, 18th and 19th; Syracuse, 17th and 18th; Buffalo, 19th.

OF AMUSEMENTS IN QUINCY, ILL., our correspondent, “Nimrod,” writing under date of Oct. 5th, says:—“After a long and protracted season of indescribable dullness the Opera House opened doors for a one night's appearance of Dupree & Benedict's Minstrels. The advent of these well known artists in this city was hailed with delight, and they met with a most cordial reception. At 8 o'clock the people turned out en masse, and the house was crowded to its utmost capacity, standing room being at par. On the appearance of the troupe they were loudly cheered, and especially was Mr. Lewis Benedict, who is a great favorite here. The first part introduced fourteen performers, and embraced many of the latest and choicest comic selections and ballads of the day, which are interspersed with numerous clever witticisms and eccentricities which succeed in entertaining the audience in the best possible manner. The clio was particularly fine. The laughable sketch, entitled ‘Bags of Shorts,’ introducing the three great comedians, Messrs. Benedict, Gleason and Reynolds, fairly took the house by storm. The act seemed to be enjoyed hugely by a number of elderly gentlemen who occupied seats in the parquet, and who, to the great amusement of the spectators around, kept up a continual roar during the entire piece.”

ELWOOD'S FEMALE MINSTRELS are billed to perform at Oil City, Pa., Oct. 11th and 12th; Roseville, 13th and 14th; Corry, 15th; Ravenna, O., 17th; Akron, 18th and 19th; Mansfield, 20th. Lew. R. Pike, who some time since disposed of his interest in this troupe, has re-purchased the same, and is now with the company as general business manager.

FRED. KIMBALL advertises for a partner to do double song and dance business.

MINSTRELSY IN BROOKLYN is proving to be very profitable this season, though the croakers prophesied that the introduction of an opposition establishment to Hooley's would spoil business for all. But so able has been the management of both houses that both have done a better business than was previously transacted by the single stage. The success attendant upon the new Opera House of Welch, Hughes and White is among the noteworthy events in the annals of negro minstrelsy. This has been brought about not only by a shrewd avoidance of the errors of past management, but by the production of really attractive and excellent performances, which have drawn to the Brooklyn Opera House the best class of audiences. Mr. White has wisely excluded all the political gags. The week's bill at the house of the three W.'s includes the names of Norman, Arlington, Booker, Harris, &c., besides the noted trio of stars who are permanently on hand. .....Hooley's Opera House has been fashionably crowded the past week, the great attraction being the burlesque of “Trovatore,” which is not only capitally performed, but it has been placed upon the stage in a far superior style to anything of the kind ever attempted at the establishment before. The “Miserere” scene is up to the highest mark of musical burlesque, the singing and scenery being specially noteworthy for excellence. Unsworth's stump speaking is a feature of the other part of the bill.

THE ARCH STREET OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, continues to be filled nightly with fashionable and delighted audiences, witnessing the excellent performances of Simmons and Slocum's Minstrels. Last week Tommy Sully made his first appearance with this troupe, taking the place of Andy McKee as song and dance man, and his efforts to please the audience in his peculiar line were received with merited applause. J. Rudolph, comedian, also put in an appearance. The programme last week consisted, after an excellent first part, of the laughable acts of “Wanted a Nurse” and “A Squire for a Day.” Cornet solo by Wm. Ewers; Tommy Sully in his songs and dances; burlesque ballad, by Charles Heywood; and concluded with an entirely new burlesque, entitled “Yeast Lynne,” which was put on the stage in an excellent manner as regards scenery and costumes, and is enlivened with good music and considerable comic action, which brings all the talent of the company into conspicuous play. On Monday evening, the 10th inst., W. Henry Rice, burlesque prima donna, will make his first appearance at this establishment. The programme for the present week will embrace the amusing acts of “In and Out,” “The Invaded Studio,” “Arrival of Nilsson,” and “The Jumping Jack,” in addition to the successful burlesque of “Yeast Lynne.”.....At Carncross and Dixey's, Mr. James G. Russell, late of Bryant's Minstrels, was added to the troupe last week, and made his debut in the first part, and proved an excellent acquisition, having a baritone voice of good quality and compass. Bobby Newcomb appeared in a laughable burlesque of Lingard.

POOLE'S ACADEMY OF MUSIC commenced a brief season at Temperance Hall, Toronto, Canada, on Oct. 3d.

DELEHANTY, HENGLER AND BLOODGOOD'S COMBINATION performed in Rand's Hall, Troy, N. Y., on Oct. 4th and 5th.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS are billed to play in Springfield, Ill., Oct. 11th, and Decatur, Ill., Oct. 12th. SK

AMUSEMENTS.

WHO IS BEN HOGAN?

EDITOR SENTINEL.—I have heard a great deal about a man who I understood to be of most notorious bad character. That man, the people tell me, is known by the name of Ben Hogan. He has been charged in public print with being the keeper of a gambling house and all that sort of thing—a very bad and dangerous man. Now, I happened to see this gentleman, Ben Hogan, during my sojourn in Kittanning. I looked at him, and from what I had heard of him I began to think that I was in the presence of a hyena or man eater, but how much relieved I was, when, after taking the second look, I found he had the appearance of a human being. I had the courage to speak to him. He talked and looked like a man who was after some of "this world's goods." From his appearance, and from his conversation and his manners generally, I should take him to be an honest, industrious, hard-working man—a man who wants to make his own living and shows energy enough to succeed. I have no hesitation in saying that the man who has been published to the world as a notorious bad character is to-day a better man at heart than any man who ever said aught against him. I asked this "notorious Ben Hogan" what business he was engaged in. He replied to me that he was the owner of the Floating Palace, a boat that floats on the waters of the Allegheny river, near a place called Parker's Landing. I then asked him what kind of business he carried on in his boat or Floating Palace. His reply to me was as follows: "My Palace is a place for both old and young to amuse themselves, by dancing, playing music on the piano, singing songs, gymnastic exercises and all other decent and pleasant amusements."

Ben Hogan may be a bad man, but he don't look like one, he don't talk like one, and if he is a bad man "let him that is free from sin cast the first stone." (28-1t*) TRAVELER.

THE BERGER FAMILY

SWISS BELL RINGERS.

This troupe comprises, not only the talented members of the above mentioned Family, whose musical specialties are such as to enable them to perform upon every legitimate instrument known to musicians, but also includes such superior artists as
SOL SMITH RUSSELL,
the most popular Humorist in the country.
WILLIAM K. LAVAKE,
one of the best Balladists "in the business."
MISS HELEN C. HAYS,
a superior Vocalist and Instrumentalist, and
J. HENRY GARDNER,
the finest Cornet player and band leader traveling. Their second annual tour has been INAUGURATED WITH GREAT SUCCESS, and the unanimous verdict of the people and the press is that the Bergers present the MOST REFINED, DIVERSIFIED AND AMUSING ENTERTAINMENT
now before the public, a marked improvement being visible in the old, and much novelty and attraction appertaining to the new features of their performances.
THE PRESS SPEAKS OF THIS COMPANY
as follows:—
"A chaste, original and beautiful entertainment, that always draws large and refined audiences, and, more than that, always manages to please them. The troupe richly merits the patronage of all lovers of fine music and legitimate fun."—Indianapolis News, Sept. 6, 1870.
"All the members of this fine troupe are artists of meritorious quality, displaying genuine musical genius, and a great versatility in its exercise, and especially is this true of Miss Anna Berger."—Indianapolis Mirror, Sept. 10th.
"This is really one of the very best musical entertainments now being offered upon the American stage."—Indianapolis Sentinel, Sept. 8th.
"The young ladies are highly accomplished, and their performances upon the different instruments assigned to them in the Cornet Band are indeed remarkable. Those who stay away from this rare treat of musical enjoyment will miss the best performance of the season."—Indianapolis Journal, Sept. 7th.
"An entertainment more attractive to persons of good sense and good taste it would be difficult to find. All the instrumental performances are characterized by a high order of native talent, improved by thorough study and cultivation, and spiced with just enough of the comic to add an agreeable flavor."—Detroit Post, Sept. 27th.
"We but echo the universal expression of last night's audience in saying that no troupe ever afforded more satisfaction."—Grand Rapids, Mich., Eagle, Sept. 23d.
"The programme was excellently performed throughout, and its every feature was enthusiastically applauded. The execution of the troupe upon brass and stringed instruments was faultless."—Grand Rapids Democrat, Sept. 23d.
"The entertainment was a most decided success. The Bergers are so well known that they require no word of praise from us, and we will only say that they improve every time they visit us. J. H. Gardner has trained their Cornet Band to a greater degree of perfection than we have ever seen displayed in any simular organization."—East Saginaw, Mich., Courier, Sept. 27th.
"There is a high order of musical talent, cultivation and elegance about these justly celebrated performers that renders an evening passed with them exceedingly pleasant."—East Saginaw Enterprise, Sept. 27th.
"It is hardly necessary to commend them or speak of their specialties. A troupe that has so good a reputation as being finely organized and managed needs no commendation from us."—East Saginaw Enterprise, Sept. 28th.
CONCERNING THEIR SUPERIOR ADVERTISING
the Detroit Post of Sept. 30th says:—
"The bills put out by the Berger Family are the best, in an artistic sense, of any ever seen in Detroit, and are only excelled in amount by circuses."
The above are small samples from a large stock of press notices on hand, to which additions are daily being made.
Old lovers of amusement who do not patronize "The Bell Ringers" because they saw them from 25 to 100 years ago are respectfully informed that THIS IS ANOTHER FAMILY, whose entertainments practically illustrate the definition of that peculiarly American word,

PROGRESS.

The fact that the Aldermen of Jackson, Mich., in which town the Bergers are property holders and tax payers, extort twenty tickets per night from them each time they perform there, is a sufficient evidence of the merits of the Family and some, who are critically disposed, might allege it was likewise sufficient evidence of the MEANNESS OF THE ALDERMEN AFORESAID.
With their present entertainment that is characterized by NOVELTY, VARIETY, HUMOR & PROPRIETY, the Bergers will make an extended
TOUR THROUGH THE WEST AND SOUTH.
